National Aeronautics and Space Administration, 1982     The Evolving Universe Donald Hamilton, 2012-12-06 1 The Workshop and this Tome In the excellent bucolic setting of SchloB Ringberg in Upper Bavaria over 50 scientists assembled during the week of 23-28 September 1996 to discuss recent results both theoretical and observational in nature on the large scale structure of the Universe Such a topic is perhaps nowadays far too encompassing and is essentially all of what we used to call observational cosmology The original philosophy of the organization of this meeting was deliber ated aimed at the younger community and their contributions As a conse quence the content of the presentations was refreshingly new as it should be In spite of the deficiencies caused by the lack of certain key researchers in this field for one reason or another the final result was rewarding to all Although the conference was held in Fall 1996 the contributions contained herein were submitted as late as Spring 1998 thus the content maintains some degree of trendiness Originally the current volume was to be a proceedings This refers to the usual archival tome that fills one s shelf and is rarely consulted except to see the canonical group photo which by the way we also have Nevertheless I wanted something more than that Although the field is rapidly changing with so called facts in a state of constant volatility now is a good time for reflection prior to the commencement of the Sloan Survey presumably the definitive large scale program of low to moderate redshift galaxies in our lifetime The Evolving Universe, 1997 Astronomy Michael Zeilik, 1997 Zeilik provides a comprehensible survey for the introductory astronomy course that is traditionally organised and astrophysically oriented Several pictorial essays in this edition contain images from the Hubble Space Telescope Come Fly with Me! David C. Housel, Doreen K. M. Housel, 1984 Competition P.A. Keddy, 2012-12-06 Competition is one of the most important factors controlling the distribution and abundance of living creatures Sperm cells racing up reproductive tracts beetle larvae battling inside single seeds birds defending territories and trees interfering with the light available to neighbours are all engaged in competition for limited resources Along with predation and mutualism competition is one of the three major biological forces that assemble living communities Recent experimental work much of it only from the last few decades has enhanced human knowledge of the prevalence of competition in nature There are acacia trees that use ants to damage vines beetles that compete in arenas for access to dung balls tadpoles that apparently poison their neighbours birds that smash the eggs of potential competitors and plants that associate with fungi in order to increase access to soil resources While intended as an up to date reference work on the state of this branch of ecology the many non technical examples will make interesting reading for those with a general interest in nature Greatly expanded from the first prize winning edition there are entirely new chapters including one on resources and another on competition gradients in nature The author freely ranges across all major taxonomic groups in search of evidence The question of whether competition occurs is no longer useful the author maintains rather the challenge is to determine when and where each kind of competition is important in natural systems For this reason variants of competition such as intensity asymmetry and hierarchies are singled out for particular attention The book concludes with the difficulties of finding general principles in complex ecological communities and illustrates the limitations on knowledge that arise out of the biased conduct of scientists themselves Competition can be found elsewhere in living systems other than ecological communities at sub microscopic scales in the interactions of enzymes and neural pathways and over large geographic areas in the spread of human populations and contrasting ideas about the world Human societies are therefore also examined for evidence of the kinds of competition found among other living organisms Using an array of historical examples including Biblical conflicts the use of noblemen's sons in the Crusades the Viking raids in Europe strategic bombing campaigns in the Second World War and ethnic battles of the Balkans the book illustrates how most of the aspects of competition illustrated with plants and animals can be extended to the interactions of human beings and their societies
