

Stigma and the Burden of Infection

Dr. David A. Asch, University of Wisconsin-Madison

Stigma is a social process that occurs when a person is perceived to be different from others in a way that is socially disapproved. Stigma can be based on a variety of factors, including race, ethnicity, religion, sexual orientation, and physical appearance.

Stigma can have a negative impact on the health and well-being of individuals. Stigmatized individuals may experience social isolation, discrimination, and reduced access to healthcare.

Stigma can also have a negative impact on the health of communities. Stigmatized individuals may be less likely to seek healthcare, which can lead to the spread of infectious diseases.

Stigma can be a powerful force that shapes our lives. It is important to recognize the impact of stigma and to work to reduce its burden.
