Fractured Marketplace for Standardized Testing Walter M. Haney, George F. Madaus, Robert Lyons, 2012-12-06

Standardized testing in the United States has been increasing at a rapid pace in the last twenty five years The market for tests has not only been expanding rapidly but has also been changing sharply in structure into a fractured marketplace Indeed one of the main features of this book is that the market for standardized testing is highly fractured with segments of the market facing monopoly conditions others facing oligopoly conditions and still others where near free market conditions exist One of the main premises of the book is that the structures of markets have strong implications for how those markets perform While this notion is widely accepted among economists it is not widely appreciated in educational research A second motivation for the book is that very little scholarly attention has been focused on the standardized testing industry This topic the structure of the testing industry and implications for the quality of tests and test use affects how we evaluate the learning of students the effectiveness of teaching the quality of schools and the educational health of the nation Of particular concern to the authors is one vital aspect of test quality test validity This book is the most current and authoritative review and

Career Development in the Schools Grafton T. Eliason, John Patrick, 2008-10-01 Career Development in the Schools describes a dynamic process that continues to evolve in its rationale and practice In many schools and in a variety of scholarly writings the status of career development is controversial Some observers assert that career development should be seen as a by product of all of the knowledge and activities that are incorporated in the educational experience In this view career development tends to be seen as a random process that happens in a natural almost magical way without specific direction or structured form However most career theorists would argue that the career development of students should be a major mission of the school a process too important to be only a by product of scattered learning and activities that are inherently uneven from student to student The prevailing contemporary perspective contends that career development in the schools should be planned have its own content derived from research and theory be systematically executed and use methods that are relevant to the developmental levels of students throughout elementary middle and senior high schools To further such ends several national models of content and practice have been formulated by the American School Counselor Association the National Career Development Revised Guidance Project and by other organizations to identify the components competencies and outcomes that students of different ages and aspirations need to acquire as they grow in maturity Several of these models are discussed at length in the various chapters of this book
