Teen Dating Violence:

Teen Dating Violence Rochelle L.. Rowley,2012 Much of the research on teen dating violence has attempted to take the ideas associated with adult domestic violence and intimate partner violence and apply it to teen relationships This research was conducted to discover the underlying dimensions of teen relationships and the violence that exists in these relationships in order to provide a conceptual idea of who should be targeted with what information and at what age with prevention efforts aimed at reducing teen dating violence Wichita Kansas has implemented a variety of prevention and intervention strategies aimed at reducing the prevalence of teen dating violence in the community for almost a decade Participants in this study were recruited from 6th through 10th graders who were scheduled to receive intervention curriculum in their schools Several items from the General Youth Relationship Survey Student Version Hertzog Matson however Hispanic teens were more likely to report that a person has certain relational entitlements over their partner This study also found that in order to provide actual prevention efforts should be targeted towards late elementary to early middle school aged students
