

de análisis del rol de los centros urbanos en las regiones. Su enfoque está dirigido hacia la comprensión de los elementos urbanos que permiten establecer jerarquías entre los diversos centros por su relación con la región que éstos están sirviendo. Una segunda contribución del profesor Labasse⁹ habla del equipamiento terciario superior —definido como los servicios altamente especializados y los centros de decisión— como un elemento fundamental en la comprensión del fenómeno de jerarquización en la Europa occidental actual. Basa la zona de atracción de las metrópolis en la densidad más o menos alta de tal tipo de equipamiento en estos centros. Termina su participación con un análisis del caso de Francia en que, tomando la perspectiva histórica, expone las fluctuaciones del poder de atracción de los diversos centros actuales. Marie-Andrée Prost¹⁰ a continuación, hace una presentación crítica de los diversos métodos de jerarquización de ciudades, empleados tanto en Estados Unidos como en Francia, mediante los conceptos de base económica y dominación. Esta desarrolla un método propio de jerarquización mediante el análisis del conjunto de actividades urbanas. Los profesores Antoine y Weill¹¹ cierran la obra con una discusión muy interesante sobre la política de las metrópolis de equilibrio en Francia, como elementos que contrarresten la centralización parisiense. La forma de análisis se basa, fundamentalmente, en las relaciones entre la metrópoli y sus regiones ya que consideran la metrópoli como un todo con su región funcional por ser el elemento más dinámico de la unidad. La metodología de análisis y de exposición en sí es interesante por la claridad y sistematización con que los conceptos teóricos son llevados a la práctica.

Como se decía en un comienzo, este libro presenta los avances más recientes de los geógrafos y economistas sobre los conceptos espaciales de las actividades económicas. Parece fundamental insistir sobre la importancia que tiene el análisis de distribución espacial de la economía como complemento del estudio a nivel nacional. Sin una noción clara de ellos tendremos siempre una visión demasiado agregada de los fenómenos, aunque lleguemos a una desagregación sectorial óptima. El análisis regional toma cada día mayor relevancia en la determinación de políticas de desarrollo tanto como en los procesos de planificación en todos sus niveles.

W. PAUL STRASSMANN, Technological Change and Economic Development: the Manufacturing Experience of Mexico and Puerto Rico. Ithaca, Nueva York, Cornell University Press, 1968. 353 pp.

Se trata de un examen del cambio tecnológico y su relación con el desarrollo económico, mediante el análisis general del problema y a través de ejemplos extraídos de la experiencia de México y Puerto Rico, a base de una pequeña muestra de empresas. El tema es especialmente interesante porque incluye el análisis de las posibilidades de elevar la productividad

Technological Change And Economic Development The Manufacturing Experience Of Mexico And Puerto Rico:

Technological Change and Economic Development Wolfgang Paul Strassmann, 1968 Study based on a comprehensive literature survey on industrial progress and on case studies in Mexico and Puerto Rico of the course which technological change in manufacturing industries takes during early industrialization Statistical tables Technological

Transformation in the Third World: Volume 3 Surendra J. Patel, 2018-03-26 Originally published in 1993 this book contains 3 studies from Latin America Mexico Puerto Rico and Venezuela These studies bring out sharply the processes at work in Latin America between 1950 and 1980 which were responsible for the crisis that the continent faced in the 1980s In each case there was a striking failure in building up national technological capability so that the country could grapple with the problems it faced The University System and Economic Development in Mexico Since 1929 David

Lorey, 1993-11-01 For decades Mexican leaders and scholars as well as outside observers have spoken of a Mexican university system in crisis expressing concern over student political activism and violence declining quality of instruction and facilities crowded campuses and lack of employment for graduates When the government harshly suppressed a student movement in 1968 world attention focused on the turmoil that was endemic in university life During the severe economic slump of the 1980s the fundamental weaknesses of the Mexican economy its inefficiency and inability to compete in the world were often attributed to failings of the university system Using original quantitative data on the graduates of all Mexican universities in a dozen major professional fields since 1929 the author explores the nature of this purported crisis by examining a series of questions about the Mexican university system How have the changing policy priorities of the Mexican government affected the university's education of professionals How have the Mexican economy's needs for professionals shaped the functioning of the university system Has Mexico trained enough professionals Have they been trained in the right fields Has the university been able to respond to demands for upward mobility through higher education The author's detailed analysis reveals a paradox to the extent that Mexican universities may not be producing the kinds of expertise needed for competing in the new global marketplace that educational quality has declined gradually over time and that the university has not contributed much to social mobility one may indeed speak of a crisis Yet because the university system has reached its present form in response to demands placed on it by government the economy and society responding pragmatically to circumstances beyond its control the author concludes that the crisis is not fundamentally a university crisis but rather one that lies in Mexican economy and society at large The Economics of Technological Progress Tonu

Men in a Developing Society Jorge Balán, Harley Linwood Browning, Elizabeth Jelin, 2014-07-02 The central objective of Men in a Developing Society is to show as concretely as possible how men experience a period of rapid economic development particularly in the areas of migration occupational mobility and status attainment It is based mainly on a sample of 1 640 men in Monterrey Mexico a large and rapidly growing manufacturing metropolis in northern Mexico with much in migration and a sample of 380 men in Cedral San Luis Potos a small economically depressed community with high rates of out migration much of it to Monterrey The study of men in Monterrey is perhaps the most thorough one yet conducted of geographic and social mobility in a Latin American city In part this was possible because of the innovation of collecting complete life histories that record what each man was doing for any given year in the lay areas of residence education family formation and work These data permit the effective use of the concepts of life cycle and cohort analysis in the interpretation of the men's geographic and occupational mobility The experience of the Monterrey men in adapting to the varied changes required by their mobility was not found to be as difficult as is often indicated in the social science literature on the consequences of economic development In part this may be because Monterrey in comparison with most other Latin

American cities has been unusually successful in its economic growth The impact of migration also was lessened because most of the men had visited the city prior to moving there and many had friends or relatives in the city The age of the migrants upon arrival in Monterrey made a significant difference in subsequent occupational mobility those of nonfarm background who arrived before age 25 fared better than natives of the city Although it appears that status inheritance in Monterrey is somewhat higher than in industrialized countries a considerable proportion of men do move up the occupational ladder And perhaps as important the Monterrey men whether or not they themselves are moving up perceive the society as an open one The very success of Monterrey s development created conditions that would bring about changes in the educational economic and cultural expectations of its inhabitants Thus paradoxically the general satisfaction and the lack of group and class conflict in Monterrey over the previous decades may well have given rise to future dissatisfaction and conflict
