Technology And Developing Economies The Impact Of Eastern European Versus Western Technology Transfer:

Technology and Developing Economies Zeinab Karake-Shalhoub, 1990-05-21 This is the first empirical study to compare and contrast the effects of technology transfer to developing countries from the West and from Eastern European countries. The author's primary purpose is to compare the effects of the different technologies offered by the two groups: the capital intensive technologies of the West and the labor intensive technologies of the Eastern bloc on the economic growth of developing countries as measured by growth in output. Using an analytical method based on the production input structure, the author is able to quantify the impact on economic growth of technology transfer from different sources and with different characteristics. Karake also evaluates the experience of developing countries in importing technologies and identifies the direction, pattern, and content of those technologies. Scholars in international and economic development will find Karake's work an important contribution to the documented information concerning the trade in technology and its relation to economic growth and technological interdependence. Following an introductory chapter, Karake offers a general discussion of the relationships among development, growth, and technology. She then introduces the econometric time series models and describes the basic study structure. The next section examines policies, mechanisms, and trends in technology transfer in both the West and the East, focusing on such issues as the factors and policies which affect technology transfer to the Middle East and patterns of technological exports. A chapter devoted to model formulation, empirical analysis, estimation, and results specifies the empirical models used in the study and presents statistical analysis of the appropriate data. Finally, Karake summarizes the major research findings, suggests avenues for further research, and assesses the future of technology transfer activity. Four appendices containing important supplemental information and a bibliography complete the study.

East-West Technology Transfer, 1984 Organizational Strategy and Technological Adaptation to Global Change Frank McDonald, Richard Thorpe, 2016-07-27 Confronting the wide range of factors that management faces in relation to global changes, this volume focuses on the implications of these changes for organizations. By presenting its case using a variety of analytical tools ranging from formal game theoretical systems to inductive models based on case studies, this volume concentrates on three main areas: the implications of global change on the competitive environment for employment and working practices; the influence of the international business environment in decision making; and the importance of cultural and institutional diversity. Through its comprehensive approach, this book will stimulate business managers, academics, and students to clarify, develop, and extend the many complex scenarios that are integral to the debate on how business organizations can benefit from the challenges produced by global change. Trade and Technology: East-West trade and technology transfer United States. Welfens,2012-12-06 After a decade of Eurosclerosis the EC is moving with renewed economic growth and increasing multinational investment toward a single European market under the heading Project 1992 The creation of a single EC market creates dynamic adjustment needs and opens up new opportunities for international business in a period of intensified global competition and dramatic politico economic changes Since the mid 1980s Eastern Europe is undergoing a radical shift towards market based economic systems a difficult and fragile development so far which is further complicated by economic and political unification of Germany in central Europe After the era of British and later U S leadership in multinational investment German and Japanese multinational companies are becoming more influential players worldwide Firms from Germany play a special role because German unification of 1990 implies a bigger home market but also the diversion of total investment activities towards the greater German home market While the political divide of Europe has ceased to exist the economic division is becoming more apparent and it could indeed transitorily increase because the EC 1992 project primarily generates growth impulses in Western Europe while systemic transformations in Eastern Europe reduce output growth in the short term

Soviet And Post-Soviet Telecommunications Robert W Campbell, 2019-06-04

THE TELECOMMUNICATIONS SECTOR constitutes a vital infrastructure for a modern society It is part of the working mechanism of a decentralized flexible and dynamic market economy It also serves as the foundation for a pluralistic political system with a government accountable to the public The crucial role of communications is increased by synergistic interaction between globalization of economic processes and the continuing technical revolution in information processing and communication One of the most revealing indicators of the inability of the old Soviet system to attain its goal of matching the performance of the advanced market economies was its neglect of telecommunications The sector was always treated as an orphan devalued because in line with a peculiar Marxian notion it was not considered part of material production 1 and was starved of attention and resources
