Technology Investment And Trade:

Technology, Investment, and Trade Kimio Uno, 1991 Trade and Technology Promotion Act United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Governmental Affairs, 1990 Technology and Trade, 1986 Technology Policy: Trade and technology issues United States. Congress. House. Committee on Science, Space, and Technology. Subcommittee on Technology, Environment, and Aviation, 1993 Trade and Technology United States. Congress. House. Committee on Science, Space, and Technology. Subcommittee on Technology and Competitiveness, 1991 Trade, Foreign Direct Investment, and International Technology Transfer Kamal Saggi, 2010 What role does trade play in international technology transfer Do technologies introduced by multinational firms diffuse to local firms What kinds of policies have proved successful in encouraging technology absorption from abroad and why Using these questions as motivation this article surveys the recent trade literature on international technology transfer paying particular attention to the role of foreign direct investment The literature argues that trade necessarily encourages growth only if knowledge spillovers are international in scope Empirical evidence on the scope of knowledge spillovers national versus international is ambiguous Several recent empirical plant level studies have questioned earlier studies that argued that foreign direct investment has a positive impact on the productivity of local firms Yet at the aggregate level evidence supports the view that foreign direct investment has a positive effect on economic growth in the host country Trade, Foreign Direct Investment, and International Technology Transfer Kamal Saggi, 1999 The author surveys the literature on trade and foreign direct investment especially wholly owned subsidiaries of multinational firms and international joint ventures as channels for technology transfer He also discusses licensing and other arms length channels of technology transfer He concludes 1 How trade encourages growth depends on whether knowledge spillover is national or international Spillover is more likely to be national for developing countries than for industrial countries 2 Local policy often makes pure foreign direct investment infeasible so foreign firms choose licensing or joint ventures The jury is still out on whether licensing or joint ventures lead to more learning by local firms 3 Policies designed to attract foreign direct investment are proliferating Several plant level studies have failed to find positive spillover from foreign direct investment to firms competing directly with subsidiaries of multinationals However these studies treat foreign direct investment as exogenous and assume spillover to be horizontal when it may be vertical All such studies do find the subsidiaries of multinationals to be more productive than domestic firms so foreign direct investment does result in host countries using resources more effectively 4 Absorptive capacity in the host country is essential for getting significant benefits from foreign direct investment Without adequate human capital or investments in research and development spillover fails to materialize 5 A country's policy on protection of intellectual property rights affects the type of industry it attracts Firms for which such rights are crucial such as pharmaceutical firms are unlikely to invest directly in countries where such protections are weak or will not invest in manufacturing and research and development activities Policy on intellectual property rights also influences whether technology transfer comes through licensing joint ventures or the establishment of wholly owned subsidiaries
