Technology, World Politics, & American Policy Victor Basiuk, 1977 American Technology Policy J. D. Kenneth Boutin, 2012-12-31 Since the end of the Cold War U S policymakers have faced the challenge of addressing the technological requirements of both economic competitiveness and national security Promoting the technological objectives of competitiveness and security poses a daunting task as these objectives can differ significantly in terms of autonomy the private sector s role and the time frame involved The difficulties inherent in meeting these competing needs for technological investment and resources are exacerbated by growing technological globalization American Technology Policy analyzes the ongoing efforts of politicians legislators policymakers and industry leaders to balance their often conflicting technological requirements J D Kenneth Boutin examines recent trends and developments in American technology policy as it strives to support high technology firms without undermining national security He then considers issues of autonomy relations between the federal government and industry and the time frame involved in formulating and implementing policy initiatives all in the context of globalization Though satisfying the ambitious American technological agenda is difficult it is impossible for authorities to avoid making the effort given the high stakes involved Boutin s analysis is intended to inform those who are charged with prioritizing and balancing the technological needs of national defense and economic growth Although the post Cold War technology policy of the United States has been characterized by efforts to achieve a balance between these two competing priorities the dominant focus remains on national security Boutin explains the ways in which American authorities seek to limit the extent of compromise necessary by working with local and foreign actors and by encouraging structural changes in the environment for technological development application and diffusion Technology and World Politics Daniel R. Global Politics Anthony G. McGrew,Paul Lewis,2013-05-02 This innovative new text is derived from a highly successful Open University course of the same title It takes as a dominant theme the contested issue of globalization the apparent intensification of global patterns of inter dependence and its implications for the autonomy of the modern nation state Following a conceptual introduction which critically examines the theoretical debates framing the study of world politics the work is structured around four key processes of globalization which the authors identify as being the central determinants of contemporary global politics These key processes are the global impact of great power relations the globalizing tendencies of technological innovation the existence of a global economy and the globalizing force of modernity Reflecting this structure the text is organized into four discrete sections Each section explores both theoretically and empirically one of the four processes of globalization Throughout particular attention is paid both to a critical evaluation of these globalizing processes as well as to their consequences for the sovereignty and autonomy of the modern nation state Moreover the authors combine a lucid treatment of theoretical debates with topical case study material to produce a text which is extremely accessible to undergraduate students studying international relations and politics and to those readers with little prior knowledge of world affairs
