Weber, 2019-04-01

Late nineteenth century Mexico was a country rife with health problems In 1876 one out of every nineteen people died prematurely in Mexico City a staggeringly high rate when compared to other major Western world capitals at the time which saw more modest premature death rates of one out of fifty two London one out of forty four Paris and one out of thirty five Madrid It is not an exaggeration to maintain that each day dozens of bodies could be found scattered throughout the streets of Mexico City making the capital city one of the most unsanitary places in the Western Hemisphere In light of such startling scenes in Death Is All around Us Jonathan M Weber examines how Mexican state officials including President Porfirio Díaz tried to resolve the public health dilemmas facing the city By reducing the high mortality rate state officials believed that Mexico City would be seen as a more modern and viable capital in North America To this end the government used new forms of technology and scientific knowledge to deal with the thousands of unidentified and unburied corpses found in hospital morgues and cemeteries and on the streets Tackling the central question of how the government used the latest technological and scientific advancements to persuade citizens and foreigners alike that the capital city and thus Mexico as a whole was capable of resolving the hygienic issues plaguing the city Weber explores how the state's attempts to exert control over procedures of death and burial became a powerful weapon for controlling the behavior of its citizens The Future of

Physical Education Anthony Laker, 2003-12-16 Anthony Laker leads an outstanding international team of educational theorists in critically examining the theoretical underpinnings of physical education and in challenging the rhetoric the practices and the pedagogies that prevail in our schools There has been a great deal of discussion surrounding the value of this subject in schools particularly around the form that physical education should take The domination of physical education teaching by the scientific technical discourses is problemized and it is suggested that this domination limits the potential of the subject to be culturally and contextually relevant to students in schools This edited collection aims to extend the worldwide academic debate of the future of physical education in schools by challenging the prevailing authorised curricula

Each contributor address a key contemporary issue in physical education bringing different perspectives as they relate to the evolving issues of the subject They ask important questions about where we intend to take the knowledge we have gained from a legacy of positive research These chapters tackle critical issues in modernist physical education and suggest how a re evaluation could contribute to the continuing advancement of the subject for more diverse educational benefits Laker draws this body of work together in a conclusion that describes a theoretically and pedagogically innovative physical education curriculum for the 21st century This book is a summary of the current state of research in physical education It invites debate and discussions in the field and re conceptualises physical education theory into inclusive practices located in the postmodern school world Pathophysiology, Homeostasis and Nursing Roger Watson,Tonks Fawcett,2003
