Children and Television Michael E. Manley-Casimir, Carmen Luke, 1987-10-05 Since the mid 1970s a shift in perspective has occurred on the relationship between TV and young viewers Researchers parents teachers policymakers and consumer advocate groups have shown increased criticism of television's role as social educator babysitter agent for mass consumer socialization and perpetrator of questionable social values morals and mythical human behaviors Educators interested in understanding the complex and wide ranging controversies about the influence of television on children will find much in this edited collection to clarify their understanding of the empirical research educational practice and national policy issues raised by the relationship between TV and children The empirical and theoretical studies in Part I explore the interactive relationship between TV and the child viewer In opposition to the widely held view that the child is a passive recipient of TV information these studies show that children's background knowledge and their cognitive and experimental skills influence how they interpret TV content symbolic form and ultimately its influence on what kind of learning takes place The effects of reciprocal relationships of TV violence commercial advertising and reading ability are investigated in other chapters in this section Part II moves to practical educational questions and presents approaches to curriculum design for the teaching of critical and literate viewing skills Innovative curricula based on principles of liberal education which encourage active and critical viewing are spelled out in detail Part III compares the policies of governments in industrialized nations in assuring the quality of children's television An annotated list of studies and position papers published from 1975 to 1983 concludes this work Television in Urban Education Fund for Media Research, Charles W. Children's Learning From Educational Television Shalom M. Fisch, 2014-04-08 At its best educational television can provide children with enormous opportunities and can serve as a window to new experiences enrich academic knowledge enhance attitudes and motivation and nurture social skills This volume documents the impact of educational television in a variety of subject areas and proposes mechanisms to explain its effects Drawing from a wide variety of research spanning several disciplines author Shalom M Fisch analyzes the literature on the impact of educational resources He focuses on television programs designed for children rather than for adults although adult literature is included when it is particularly relevant In addition much of the discussion concerns the effects of unaided viewing by children rather than viewing in the context of adult led follow up activities The role of parent child co viewing and issues relevant to the use of television in school or child care also receives consideration This volume is intended to make the disparate literature on educational television s impact more accessible by bringing it together into a centralized resource To that end the volume draws together empirical data on the impact of educational television programs both academic and prosocial on children s knowledge skills attitudes and behavior In addition to its emphasis on positive effects this volume addresses a gap in the existing research literature regarding children s learning from exposure to educational television Acknowledging that little theoretical work has been done to explain why or how these effects occur Fisch takes a step toward correcting this situation by proposing theoretical models to explore aspects of the mental processing that underlies children s learning from educational television With its unique perspective on children s educational television and comprehensive approach to studying the topic this volume is required reading for scholars researchers and students working in the area of children and television It offers crucial insights to scholars in developmental psychology family studies educational psychology and related areas

The Impact of Educational Television National Educational Television and Radio Center,1977 Using Television in the Primary School Ernest Choat,Harry Griffin,2018-02-06 Little attention has been given to the potential of video recorders and cameras in children s learning This book attempts to counteract such neglect by giving examples of good practice based on classroom experience Education for the Television Age Milton E.
