The End of Television? Elihu Katz,Paddy Scannell,2009-09-17 Is television dead The classic television era of the 1950s and 1960s characterized by limited choices of programs broadcast on over the air channels to families as if they were seated around a hearth and to a nation as if gathered around a campfire has indeed ended That early stage of sharedness and scarcity gave way to the television of plenty when satellite and cable and competition reigned choice was suddenly expanded and every room in the home had its own television set And now television offers infinite choices where we can view what we like when we like where we like on a variety of screens telephones and Web sites Some researchers assert that television is not dead but has merely moved from a collectivist to an individualist phase Throughout the drastic evolution of this media thousands of studies have examined the short term effects of television such as the evaluation of persuasion campaigns Yet there is scant research on the overreaching sociological impacts of television and its centrality to Western culture over the past 60 years This compelling volume of The ANNALS is the first collection of rigorous articles devoted to studying ways in which television has impacted our values ideologies institutions social structure and culture Focusing on classic television these leading experts in media studies delve into the effects on social institutions namely family and politics and its effects on values and everyday behavior These seminal articles lay the groundwork for innovative studies of the numerous ways that television has impacted democracy social integration nation and family trust and suspiciousness materialism and identity social and physical Students and researchers will find a wealth of inspiration for new research projects It is a must have resource for social scientists interested in media studies

McCombs,Donald L. Shaw,David H. Weaver,2013-11-05 Exciting intellectual frontiers are open for exploration as agenda setting theory moves beyond its 25th anniversary This volume offers an intriguing set of maps to guide this exploration over the near future It is intended for those who are already reasonably well read in the research literature that has accumulated since the publication of McCombs and Shaw s original 1972 Public Opinion Quarterly article This piece of literature documented the influence of the news media agenda on the public agenda in a wide variety of geographic and social settings elaborated the characteristics of audiences and media that enhance or diminish those agenda setting effects and cataloged those exogenous factors explaining who sets the media s agenda In the current volume a provocative set of maps for explicating new levels of agenda setting theory have been sketched by a new generation of young scholars launching an enterprise that has significant implications for theoretical research and for the day to day role of mass communication in democratic societies At the first level of agenda setting are agendas of objects the traditional domain of agenda setting research represented by an accumulation of hundreds of studies over the past quarter century At the second level of agenda setting are agendas of attributes one of the new theoretical frontiers whose aspects are discussed in detail in the opening chapters Other chapters offer maps of yet other theoretical frontiers including political advertising agendas and their impact on behavior the framing of various agendas in the mass media and the differential impact of print and TV the theoretical role of individual differences in the agenda setting influence of the news media on the public agenda methodological advances for determining cause and effect roles in agenda setting and the application of agenda setting theory to historical analysis This volume is an invitation to others to become active members of the invisible college of agenda setting scholarship As such the goals of this book are threefold to introduce a broad set of ideas about agenda setting to enrich the exploration of these ideas by enhancing scholarly dialogue among the members of this invisible college and to enhance the discussion of agenda setting research in seminars and research groups around the world Agenda setting has remained a vital and productive area of communication research over a quarter century because it has continued to introduce new research questions into the marketplace of ideas and to integrate this work with other theoretical concepts and perspectives about journalism and mass communication Understanding the dynamics of agenda setting is central to understanding the dynamics of contemporary democracy This book s set of theoretical essays grounded in the accumulated literature of agenda setting theory and in the creative insights of young scholars will help lead the way toward that understanding      Public Broadcasting for the 21st Century Marc Raboy,1996 This study examines the situation of public broadcasting worldwide in a number of different contexts from a variety of thematic perspectives The result is a global report on the question of public service broadcasting

Public Broadcasting and Political Interference Chris Hanretty,2011-05-03 Public broadcasters like the BBC and the Italian broadcaster RAI are some of the most important media organisations in the world. Politicians are often tempted to interfere in the workings of these broadcasters and when this happens the results are highly controversial as both the Blair and Berlusconi governments have discovered. Public Broadcasting and Political Interference explains why some broadcasters are good at resisting politicians' attempts at interference and have won a reputation for independence and why other broadcasters have failed to do the same. It takes a comparative approach of broadcasters in different countries including the United Kingdom, Italy, Spain and Sweden, arguing that political independence for public service broadcasters is important because of its contribution to democracy, allowing voters alternative sources of information which allow them to choose between electoral alternatives. The book will be of interest to policy makers, scholars and students of political communication, broadcasting and the media.

Television and Political Life Anthony Smith, 1979

The Politics of Southeast Asia's New Media William Atkins, 2013-11-19

The past decade has seen a major structural shift in broadcasting in Southeast Asia with the development of digital satellite and cable broadcasting. This shift has impacted upon some of the most information sensitive governments in the world: Singapore, Malaysia and until recently Indonesia. Atkins traces this development in five countries, showing that the challenge to authoritarian regimes anticipated by modern theorists as a result of the globalization of news and information is not materializing. Instead, a new commercial elite has arisen in Southeast Asia: its own mini moguls who act as gatekeepers for state interests as partners to global media companies.

Comparing Media Systems Daniel C. Hallin, Paolo Mancini, 2004-04-12

Building on a survey of media institutions in eighteen West European and North American democracies, Hallin and Mancini identify the principal dimensions of variation in media systems and the political variables which have shaped their evolution. They go on to identify three major models of media system development: the Polarized Pluralist, Democratic Corporatist and Liberal models, to explain why the media have played a different role in politics in each of these systems and to explore the forces of change that are currently transforming them. It provides a key theoretical statement about the relation between media and political systems, a key statement about the methodology of comparative analysis in political communication and a clear overview of the variety of media institutions that have developed in the West, understood within their political and historical context.
