

The Morning After Wilfrid Sheed

Farrar, Straus and Giroux

From the foreword by John Leonard

"Sheed is neither a propagandist nor a comedian. He does not come around to the event, he is literary or political, with an ideological spear and a theoretical net. Not does he cater to the reader (and the event) some stupefyingly postmodern academic scheme that reads as though it had been translated from the Quichea, which is not of course a serious language. Books are not criminals to him, having stood against history or psychoanalysis or the churches of Christ, Trotsky and Robert Borker. Sheed is a humanist, with all the intelligence and generosity, humor and wisdom, the true implies, and nothing human fails to move him according to its own definition. . . ."

"Indeed, what's most characteristic about Sheed the reviewer is the care with which he chooses his subjects. He probes issues of democracy and undergrowth without hesitating. The will is not imposed on every book, person and event, the will says behind the style, the book, person or even circumstance are evasive. Connections are thus carefully made, comparisons measured, distinctions made, grace bestowed, without the reader ever sickening at any point of age."

"Though Sheed's company is on the other side of the line, a writer, writer, friend."
