The Everyday Violence of Forced Displacement Miriam Geerse, 2023-10-16 The Everyday Violence of Forced Displacement Memory Community and Identity Politics among Internally Displaced Kurds in Turkey is based on ethnographic research in four Istanbul neighborhoods in the early 2000s and after Miriam Geerse focuses on individuals and families that tried to sustain meaningful lives in an urban context marked by political and structural violence Geerse argues that forces other than war and forced displacement instilled in many forced migrants a pressing need and desire to keep hammering home the price and pain of displacement. Much of this book then bears witness to the formation of an oppositional consciousness. Geerse's analysis of the mobilization of social capital in times of illness and social conflict offers an understanding of how a dispersed community of people who share the same stories function in an inhospitable urban environment. In laying bare the interconnections between experiences before, during and after forced displacement and by focusing on people's narratives and their experiences, Geerse provides insight to activists striving to improve the position of Kurds, to academics studying the impact of forced migration and other forms of political violence on civilians and to all those who argue for a more balanced view of the recent history of Turkey.

Turkey in Turmoil Berna Pekesen, 2020-06-22. The essays in this book are the first scholarly attempt to examine the complex interrelation of social change and political radicalization during the 1960s. In analyzing topics ranging from the 1968 student uprising, working class politics and trade unionism, Anti Americanism, right wing and left wing militant action, communitarian violence, state coercion and the artistic representation of these phenomena, the contributors offer insights to help to answer why the experiences of this decade turned so radical with lasting polarizing effects on contemporary Turkish society today. Even though issues surrounding the topic are at the very center of intellectual and political debates in today's Turkey, such as the collective remembrance of the Turkish 68ers and of the anti communist state persecution and prosecution after the military intervention in 1980, a cohesive analysis of this era is still strikingly absent in scholarly works. Thus Turkey in Turmoil is unique in many regards. As important as the presented diversity in research perspectives, the volume will also showcase multiple and at some point contesting and even provocative perspectives on the subject at hand.

Understanding Insurgency Francis O'Connor, 2021-08-26. No insurgent movement can survive without some degree of popular support, but what does it mean to support an armed group? Focusing on the PKK (Kurdistan Workers Party) which has come to global attention in recent years for its efforts in resisting ISIS in Iraq and Syria but has been present and active in the region for much longer, Francis O'Connor explores the first three decades of the PKK's insurgency in Turkey. Looking at how the relationship between armed groups and their supporters should be conceptually understood, how this relationship varies spatially and what role violence has in their relationship, he draws on Civil War, Social Movements and Rebel Governance literatures to outline how the PKK survived a military coup in 1980 and slowly won popular support through incipient forms of rebel governance, the targeted use of violence and a nuanced projection of its ideology and objectives. In doing so, it provides an historical narrative to an organisation which has managed to successfully resist NATO's second largest army with limited weapons for decades and has become a key player of Kurdish rights in the wider region.

Consumption Manifesto Günce Demir, Consumption Manifesto offers a deep dive into the sociological layers of small town dynamics in Turkey, specifically examining the Manisa gentry's use of living room furniture as a tool for social distinction. Written by Dr Günce Demir and adapted from her PhD thesis, the book investigates how furniture preferences consumption patterns and intergenerational shifts in taste reflect the gentry's evolving status within a complex social hierarchy. Blending the theories of Marx, Weber and Bourdieu, the study unveils how the Manisa gentry employ material culture to assert their identity, differentiate themselves from others and adapt to societal transformations over time. By focusing on the living room, a symbolic space of representation, the author sheds light on how personal choices resonate with broader societal structures, shaping and reflecting the ever-changing notions of class status and tradition. For readers interested in sociology, cultural studies or the nuanced interplay between consumption and identity, Consumption Manifesto provides a groundbreaking perspective on the intricate relationship between material goods and social stratification in small town Turkey.

Turkey's Alevi Enigma Paul J. White, Joost Jongerden, 2021-08-04 This volume discusses how the multifaceted reality of Turkey's Alevis impinges on society and politics in contemporary Turkey. The book provides readers with a vigorous discussion of the origins and history of the Alevis, examines their ethnic identity and cultural representation as well as appraising their political life and the effect that this had on Turkey's polity, the Turkish Left and the Kurdish National Movement and upon the emergence of civil society. It analyses Alevi cultural manifestations and even looks at how Alevi diaspora communities in Europe affect Turkey in various ways. The book therefore provides readers with a convenient handbook of an important group that is largely unknown in the West.

Kurdish Life in Contemporary Turkey Anna Grabolle Celiker, 2015-06-19 The question of Kurdish identity and belonging is counted among the most controversial and challenging topics in modern Turkey. This book cuts to the heart of this debate in an exploration of shifting Kurdish identities brought on by extensive rural-urban labour migration. This has shaped the lives of many rural Turkish Kurds as competing discourses on religiosity, gender relations and social hierarchy redraw the boundaries of traditional life. The focus of this book is migration from Kurdish villages in eastern provincial Turkey to the regional capital of Van and to Istanbul in the west, what started with seasonal migration of young men in the 1980s and has resulted in whole families leaving their emptying villages behind. This pattern of migration has created translocational networks through which discourses are created, maintained and also challenged. Village life, for instance, becomes discursively romanticised or disparaged depending on the situation of the migrant. These networks come to consist of people who share lineage membership or origin; migrants may activate these links for marriages, favours and political advantage. At the same time, migration has led to more socio-economic differentiation between Kurds and some have transcended ties based purely on ethnic origin. Increased education, both a motive for and a result of migration, has become an instrument of linguistic assimilation as families lose Kurdish as a language of communication and a marker of ethnic differentiation. Traditional social paradigms characterised by a gender-age hierarchy and religious piety are challenged by and coexist with alternative gender roles and images. The everyday experiences of rural-urban migrants from Van province on the south-eastern borders of the country are central to this book, but they are inextricably linked to conflicting discourses on Kurdishness and the place of this
