Spaces For Children The Built Environment And Child Development:

Spaces for Children T.G. David, C.S. Weinstein, 2013-11-11 As a developmental psychologist with a strong interest in children's response to the physical environment I take particular pleasure in writing a foreword to the present volume. It provides impressive evidence of the concern that workers in environmental psychology and environmental design are displaying for the child as a user of the designed environment and indicates a recognition of the need to apply theory and findings from developmental and environmental psychology to the design of environments for children. This seems to me to mark a shift in focus and concern from the earlier days of the interaction between environmental designers and psychologists that occurred some two decades ago and provided the impetus for the establishment of environmental psychology as a subdiscipline. Whether because children though they are consumers of designed environments are not the architect's clients or because it seemed easier to work with adults who could be asked to make ratings of environmental spaces and comment on them at length a focus on the child in interaction with environments was comparatively slow in developing in the field of environment and behavior. As the chapters of the present volume indicate that situation is no longer true today and this is a change that all concerned with the well being and optimal functioning of children will welcome. Spaces for Transforming Children's Spaces Alison Clark, 2010-02-25 How can young children play an active role in developing the design of learning environments? What methods can be used to bring together children's and practitioners' views about their environment? What insights can young children offer into good designs for these children's spaces? With the expansion of early childhood education and the move to extended schools, more young children will spend more time than ever before in institutions. Based on two actual building projects, this book is the first of its kind to demonstrate the possibilities of including young children's perspectives in the design and review of children's spaces. Situated at the heart of the debate about the relationship between the built environment and its impact on children's learning and wellbeing, Transforming Children's Spaces provides insights into how young children see their environment, discusses children's aspirations for future spaces, develops the Mosaic approach pioneered by the author as a method for listening to young children and adults. Emphasising the importance of visual and verbal methods of communication, this fascinating book demonstrates how practitioners and young children can articulate their perspectives and shows how participatory methods can support new relationships between children, practitioners and architects. This book is essential reading for those who work in children's spaces and for those who design them, as well as being of general interest to those studying education and childhood studies.

Creating a Sense of Place in School Environments Sun-Young Rieh, 2020-04-01 Creating a Sense of Place in School Environments guides its readers to the characteristics that tend to generate a sense of place through children's vivid descriptions of their school and provides a body of critical information that can be employed to design a better school environment that can imprint cherished childhood memories. The childhood school environment calls for special attention regarding the sense of place it creates. The sense of place in childhood both affects children's current quality of life and frames their lasting world view. It is well known that children's cognitive development is closely related to their place.

attachment to their surroundings and that children's adaptation to a given environment depends on how such place attachment can be created. Therefore it is natural that people's identity in the world is the accumulation of their experience of place while in childhood. Cross checking between the imprint of adults' memories of places in school and children's current lived experience of their favorite school place confirmed that certain spatial configurations which the author herein refers to as place generators can generate positive attributes of physical settings that construct a sense of place and last as lifelong memories. It is an ideal read for academics, students and professionals.

Professional Practice in Facility Programming (Routledge Revivals) Wolfgang Preiser, 2015-06-11. This compelling resource which was first published in 1993 was the first book on facility programming to design parameters and specifications over a broad range of project types. The book's practical how-to approach is exceedingly beneficial to professionals and students involved with a wide variety of building types from corporate facilities to parks, day care centres, health centres and correctional facilities. It also covers the fine points of working with clients. The contributors provide real world case studies endowing the reader with the tools necessary to reap a deeper understanding and a more critical assessment of the major programming approaches today. Professional Practice in Facility Programming is a uniquely current self-contained resource that will prove invaluable to a wide cross section of practitioners and students.

Exploring Outdoor Play In The Early Years Maynard, Trisha, Waters, Jane, 2014-06-01. The aim of this text is to explore outdoor play in the early years focusing in particular on early years settings and young children aged 0 to 7 years.

Landscapes for Learning Sharon Stine, 1996-12-06. Ask people what they remember most about the physical surroundings of their childhood and they're likely to describe a special place: out of doors, a school yard, a patch of woods, a community garden. For it is outside space that is most conducive to the ebb and flow of spontaneous activities, offers rich and often surprising sensory input and provides endless possibilities for exploration. If the classroom is the place where children are taught, the outdoors is where they learn on their own. A growing legion of landscape architects is exploring and exploiting the ability to create outdoor environments that optimize the learning experience and mirror the ideas, values, attitudes and cultures of those who inhabit them. In Landscapes for Learning Dr Sharon Stine presents 11 case studies of the very best of these design projects from around the world. Her findings describe not only design concepts and end results, rich outdoor learning environments but more importantly the processes that led to the creation of these environments. She examines the roles of designers, teachers and the children themselves and how their interaction affects the planning, building and use of the space. Dr Stine shows how the most successful designs address the needs of both the children whose job it is to mess up the space and the adults who supervise them. She defines nine pairs of contrasting elements that are essential to any play environment and uses these both as the basis for her analyses of particular environments and as the foundation of a common language that designers and educators can use when developing a new design. She also addresses the issues of safety and security and demonstrates that learning environments can be stimulating, interesting links with the natural world and safe.
