The chapters challenge prevailing notions of distance and difference, comparative philosophy, worlding practices, and contact zones. In the remaking of subjects, the unhoming of geopolitics, and new approaches to relationality, youth and classrooms' complexities in preserving and questioning identity are laid bare and renovated. How technologies challenge and redefine racialization, engendering and internationalization are examined amid the reworking of oppression, success, well-being, politics, method, and power. It is also a key text for postgraduate students and teachers interested in technological impact, globality, policymaking, and new ways of conducting research in contexts of digitalization and social media.
