Abstract: As the tourism industry is embedded in the countryside, space, which is an important means of production of modern industries, has undergone significant changes in the models and trends of spatial transform. This paper aims to analyze the development pattern of rural economic and social structure driven by the tourism industry. Based on the spatial syntax model, it takes Matao Village of China as the research sample and decomposes the evolutionary process of rural space transform. Firstly (1) in the self-driven development stage, the rural space presented a polar core development trend with high intelligibility and obvious agglomeration. Secondly (2) in the tourism-driven development stage, firstly, the driving force of the tourism industry was relatively weak, whereas the traditional spatial core still occupied an absolute advantage in the whole village space. However, with further development, the spatial scope of high Integration and Choice Values has expanded, resulting in multiple spatial development agglomeration centers. Based on this, it is proposed that a village with a tourism industry should integrate village spatial development planning with landscape style, focus on the regeneration and development of the old space core, and strengthen the integration and correlation of the old and new space clusters.

1. Introduction

With the gradual adjustment of global economic and industrial structure, the constant intensification of urbanization and the promotion of informatization, rural spaces are facing a critical period of aggravated change, reconstruction and reorganization [1]. The strategy of “developing multiple forms of appropriate scale management” and “promoting the integrated development of the primary, secondary and tertiary industries in rural areas” promoted the transformation of the rural spatial development mode from a single path and homogeneity to multiple development and heterogeneity. The social capital, state power, foreign tourists and other complex interest subjects brought by rural tourism and the various modernity and mobility forces involved behind them have rapidly and forcefully flooded into rural spaces [2]. Those elements promote the functional change and structural reorganization of rural space and are becoming the core driving force to drive the transformation of rural space rapidly and forcefully [3]. In addition, relative closure of rural space has been broken, and the distribution, organizational form, carried function and transformation pattern of space have all changed significantly [4,5]. Driven by the tourism industry, rural settlement space has focused on the development trend of consumerization and commoditization, exploring differentiated space steering paths and presenting a variety of scenarios, which led to many new industries, new forms and new business models [6,7].

Space as a whole enters into the production model of modern tourism: the land, the underground, the air, and even the light are incorporated into the productivity and

Spatial Evolution of Manufacturing James M. Gilmour, 1972-12-15 Europeans who settled previously unpopulated and unexploited regions of the world during the 18th and 19th centuries of the world had two economic alternatives subsistence activities or the production of primary goods for export In general the latter prevailed and the landscape and economy were transformed This study examines industrial growth in Southern Ontario one of the most economically successful regions from 1851-1891 a period when primary activities were still very important but also when today's industrial structure was clearly being shaped Economists, geographers and those in related fields will welcome this approach which unites regional economic growth theory and an empirical examination of distributional and structural change in manufacturing in a general explanation of the spatial development of manufacturing that is relevant to all export based regions

Maritime Capital Eric W. Sager, Gerald E. Panting, 1996 In this final volume of the Atlantic Canada Shipping Project Sager and Panting argue that the decline of the shipping industry was not as has commonly been assumed the inevitable result of the conversion from wood and sail to iron and steam They show that the merchant class in failing to maintain a merchant marine built and owned in their region contributed in no small way to the Maritimes present state of underdevelopment Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc Portland OR

Hopeful Travellers David Gagan, 1981-12-15 In this exploration of the nature of social reality in a mid nineteenth century Upper Canadian farming community Professor Gagan employs the techniques of historical demography to reconstruct the population of mid Victorian Peel County specifically the histories of those families who occupied the county between 1845 and 1875 The evidence will be familiar to anyone who has tried to trace nineteenth century Canadian family roots but in this analysis the material is used to answer a broad range of questions related to the central problems of land availability and social change The author argues that in Peel County as in the rest of Upper Canada immigration settlement and population growth rapidly changed the previously agrarian frontiers of cheap and abundant farm land into mature agricultural communities Patterns of inheritance the timing of family formation the size and structure of families the life cycle experiences of men women and children chances for social betterment and patterns of vocational and geographical mobility were all linked to the problem of land availability and all underwent subtle changes as rural society attempted to adjust to the new realities of life in the clearings This book is both s significant contribution to the social history of Ontario and to the growing corpus of comparative international scholarship on the history of the family

Making Ontario John David Wood,2000 The colony that became Ontario arose almost spontaneously out of the confusion and uncertainty following the American Revolution as a quickly chosen refuge for some 10 000 Loyalists who had to leave their former homes After the War of 1812 settlers began to spread throughout the inter lake peninsula that was to become southern Ontario and by the middle of the nineteenth century expansion had led to a diversifying agriculture and an increasingly open farming landscape that replaced a mature forest ecosystem The scale of the change from forest to cropland profoundly affected what had been for many decades a rich environment for life forms from large herbivores down to microscopic creatures In Making Ontario David Wood shows that the most effective agent of change in the first century of Ontario s development was not the locomotive but settlers attempts to change the forest into agricultural land Wood traces the various threads that went into creating a successful farming colony while documenting the sacrifice of the forest ecosystem to the demands of progress progress that prepared the ground for the railway Making Ontario provides a detailed focus on environmental modification at a time of great changes It is liberally illustrated with analytical maps based on archival research J David Wood is professor of geography and urban studies at Atkinson College York University

Looking for Old Ontario Thomas F. McIlwraith, 1997-01-01 The slogan on Ontario's licence plates Yours to Discover was designed to promote travel opportunities within the province Every year thousands of tourists drive along country roads past farmyards and through hamlets en route to popular vacation spots In Looking for Old Ontario Thomas McIlwraith shows that many destinations are closer at hand than one might imagine and invites travellers to rediscover familiar countryside landmarks by reading them as chapters in a rich historical narrative Surveyors long ago scored Ontario's land and generations have since inscribed it with residences businesses and institutions This book the result of thirty years of field work and archival research is a reflection on and an interpretation of the ways in which the land and its inhabitants interrelate Looking for Old Ontario guides readers through the vernacular landscape of the province examining barns fences jails post offices inns mills canals railways roadsides cemeteries and much more McIlwraith emphasizes ordinary features of the cultural landscape which communicate social meaning to the observant eye The landscape tells us that Ontario has been inhabited by thrifty people this we can conclude by looking at the economical use and reuse of construction materials Yet the landscape also tells us that Ontario's residents have been inclined to show off consider the province's unusually large number of elegant brick dwellings To read a landscape is to think about such connections and McIlwraith's contemplative style differentiates his work from manuals or handbooks Since landscape interpretation is a highly visual subject Looking for Old Ontario is extensively illustrated with photographs drawings and maps It will be useful to general readers interested in recognizing the broader meanings of their communities heritage as well as to students of geography history and planning

Interdependent Development Harold Brookfield, 2012-08-06 Rather than being a book about development per se this work first published in 1975 is instead a book about ideas about development designed for those drawn by a concern over social injustice into the development field In a selective review of theory which gives particular emphasis to the spatial dimension in Western Marxist and neo Marxist thought Harold Brookfield traces the evolution of ideas about world inequality and the problem of development from the days before the underdeveloped countries were considered to be a major problem through the years dominated by economic growth to the more searching approaches of the contemporary era The central argument of the book is that development is a totality which cannot properly be understood by separation into parts

The developed and underdeveloped countries constitute one interdependent system and change in one cannot be understood without consideration of the other
