Telecom Nation Telecommunications Computers And Governments In Canada:

Telecom Nation Laurence B. Mussio, 2001-04-27 Laurence Mussio examines how federal and provincial public policy tried to keep pace with the diffusion of telecommunications consumer demand and a rising tide of technological innovation Telecommunications regulation struggled to maintain a balance between producer and consumer in an increasingly complex field and policy makers were compelled to defend the national interest in international telecommunications arrangements or by making far reaching decisions about transcontinental microwave systems and satellites By the late 1960s national policy makers had embraced the arrival of the computer especially once it began to be wired into Canada s communications infrastructure Telecom Nation explores the impact of the computer on government policy and the first attempts to build a national computer utility the beginnings of the Internet twenty five years before it became a reality Based primarily on the rich and largely untapped sources at the National Archives of Canada Cabinet records provincial archives and private sector repositories Telecom Nation provides an essential background to contemporary public policy issues by examining how governments reconciled technological change private enterprise consumer demand and the public good in communications It will be required reading for students and specialists interested in telecommunications public policy and technological change

Made in Canada Alan Elder, 2005-02-14 The red maple leaf is the quintessential symbol of Canada and the flag that popularized it throughout the world was designed in the 1960s as a result of government legislation aimed at creating a vital new Canadian national identity through objects, events, and building projects. Made in Canada looks at the development of Canadian craft design and culture through ambitious government programs meant to reinforce the country's identity as a modern, sophisticated, and autonomous nation. As well, it documents the demise of a singular notion of modern life and its replacement with a focus on personal identity and consumerism. Changes in the 1960s included the building of modern airports, first space satellite, and new national symbols such as the maple leaf flag. Canadians embraced this heightened sense of individuality and demanded products that were equally individual. As a result, pop culture objects sat on cool furniture influenced by Scandinavian modernism, while handmade crafts reflected a growing concern with environmental issues. Expo 67 was the turning point, one final expression of optimism before Canada was rocked by social change and varied struggles for identity. Made in Canada examines national dreams and expressions of individuality in thoughtful and illuminating essays. Contributors include Sandra Alföldy, NSCAD University; Paul Bourassa, Musée des beaux-arts de Québec; Brent Corder, designer and educator, Toronto; Douglas Coupland, artist and author, Vancouver; Bernard Flaman, Government of Saskatchewan; Rachel Gotlieb, freelance curator and writer, Toronto; Michael Large, Sheridan College; Institute of Technology and Advanced Learning; and Michael Prokopow, Design Exchange.

The Unreliable Nation Edward Jones-Imhotep, 2025-03-18 An examination of how technological failures defined nature and national identity in Cold War Canada. Throughout the modern period, nations defined themselves through the relationship between nature and machines. Many cast themselves as a triumph of technology over the forces of climate, geography, and environment. Some, however, crafted a powerful alternative identity: they defined themselves not through the triumph of machines over nature but through technological failures and the distinctive natural orders that caused them. In The Unreliable Nation, Edward Jones-Imhotep examines one instance in this larger history: the Cold War era project to extend reliable radio communications to the remote and strategically sensitive Canadian North. He argues that particularly at moments when countries viewed themselves as marginal or threatened, the identity of the modern nation emerged as a scientifically articulated relationship between distinctive natural phenomena and the problematic behaviors of complex groups of machines. Drawing on previously unpublished archival documents and recently declassified materials, Jones-Imhotep shows how Canadian defense scientists elaborated a distinctive Northern natural order of violent ionospheric storms and auroral displays and linked it to a machinic order of severe and widespread radio disruptions throughout the country. Tracking their efforts through scientific images, experimental satellites, clandestine maps, and machine architectures, he argues that these scientists naturalized Canada's technological vulnerabilities as part of a program to reimagine the postwar nation. The real and potential failures of machines came to define Canada, its hostile

Northern nature its cultural anxieties and its geo political vulnerabilities during the early Cold War Jones Imhotep s study illustrates the surprising role of technological failures in shaping contemporary understandings of both nature and nation
