Preparations for the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games Great Britain: National Audit Office, 2011-02-16 The preparations for the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games are going well overall and despite time pressures the Olympic Delivery Authority remains on course to deliver its construction programme Five of the 24 main projects being undertaken by the Olympic Delivery Authority have now been completed ready for handover and on current projections the remaining projects will be delivered on time though timings on three projects are becoming tight Progress with the complex operational planning required for Games time has also been strengthened since the NAO last reported The overall cost to the public purse of security during the Games has increased from 600 million to 757 million The final cost of the Games is inherently uncertain While the responsibility for important areas of cost has been resolved 498 million of new scope has been added and there is now less contingency available to manage risk 974 million contingency in the Public Sector Funding Package remains Risks have been reduced but there can be no guarantee that the remaining contingency will be sufficient to cover further unknown risks to the Game Progress has also been made in firming up the finances of LOCOG but there are still concerns that if it does not break even public funding will be required The report calls for an estimate of the net benefits expected to accrue to the UK which can be directly attributed to the Games

Principles of Sustainable Urban Development in the Bidding Process for Olympic Games Gregor Wiltchko, 2010-01-11 Inhaltsangabe

Introduction The more you know about the Olympics the less it is about sport Bob Perry Design director of Olympic Projects at Scott Carver Pty Ltd <http://www.infolink.com.au> The Olympic Games as a mega sports event attracts millions of people from all over the world New records fascinating performances scandals or gigantic celebrations are just some of the attractions provided by this event One attraction for urban planners is the fact that the Games imply opportunities to promote urban development From an urban planning perspective the Olympic Summer Games in Barcelona 1992 set a new standard in defining success of an event of this scale The city used the Games to promote urban development and planning strategies profiting from the event in a long term perspective Furthermore the city took another opportunity to find again a place on the global map through the Olympic Games The case of Barcelona is one of the mostly cited successful urban development initiatives connected with a mega sports event Olympic Cities have taken the opportunity to promote urban development with the event very differently in the history of the Olympics The International Olympic Committee IOC as the event owner sets some requirements giving only a few cities the right to stage the event These requirements are checked in the bidding process ending with the decision which city succeeds in getting the right of staging the event Integrating the success of an Olympic City in terms of urban development and in terms of the bidding process the main question from an urban planning perspective is What is the relevance of Urban Development in the Bidding Process for Olympic Games To answer the definition of the city's success in terms of urban development and the Olympic Games bidding process it is helpful to investigate the role of Olympic Infrastructure with a view towards urban sustainability As such it is believed that respecting specific planning principles in the bidding process can help to 1 ensure sustainable urban development and 2 enhance the quality of the bid The first aspect is relevant for the success of the city in terms of urban development to benefit from the Games in a long time perspective The second aspect is relevant for the city's success in the bidding process to acquire the right for staging the Games The aim of this thesis is to examine how the quality of the bid may respond to principles
