Foundation Engineering Handbook Hsai-Yang Fang, 2013-06-29 More than ten years have passed since the first edition was published During that period there have been a substantial number of changes in geotechnical engineering especially in the applications of foundation engineering As the world population increases more land is needed and many soil deposits previously deemed unsuitable for residential housing or other construction projects are now being used Such areas include problematic soil regions mining subsidence areas and sanitary landfills To overcome the problems associated with these natural or man made soil deposits new and improved methods of analysis design and implementation are needed in foundation construction As society develops and living standards rise tall buildings transportation facilities and industrial complexes are increasingly being built Because of the heavy design loads and the complicated environments the traditional design concepts construction materials methods and equipment also need improvement Further recent energy and material shortages have caused additional burdens on the engineering profession and brought about the need to seek alternative or cost saving methods for foundation design and construction Ocean Energy Recovery Richard J. Seymour,1992-01-01 This report establishes the state of the art in a full range of renewable energy technologies that harness the power of oceans Papers discuss mature technologies such as tidal energy extraction and conjectural technologies such as salinity gradients In addition the economics of the major systems are compared in a uniform manner making it possible to realistically assess their economic potential This publication provides a single source of balanced technical and economic assessments of competing technologies and should interest those involved in the search for alternative sources of energy Proceedings of the
