

The truth is the only thing worth having,
and, in a civilized life, like ours, where so many risks are removed, facing it is almost the only courageous thing left to do.

Anstey,2023-11-01 The Brass Bottle is a humorous fantasy novel written by F Anstey pseudonym of Thomas Anstey Guthrie published in 1900 Set in late Victorian England the story follows the misadventures of a young architect Horace Ventimore One day while working on a renovation project Horace discovers an ancient brass bottle hidden in the rubble To his astonishment the bottle contains a trapped and powerful genie named Mr Josephus Bakkus Grateful for his release the grateful genie offers Horace three wishes However as it often happens with wishes they don't go exactly as planned leading to a series of comedic and unintended consequences As Horace attempts to navigate the complexities of his newfound powers he inadvertently brings chaos and hilarity into his life His wishes though well intentioned lead to absurd situations and challenge his rationality Among the mishaps are sudden wealth mistaken identities and comical misunderstandings that keep the readers entertained Amidst the chaos a love interest emerges in the form of the charming Lady Mabel Clare further complicating Horace's life Throughout the novel Anstey masterfully blends elements of farce satire and clever wordplay creating a whimsical and engaging narrative The Brass Bottle is a delightful and witty tale that explores the idea of the consequences of one's desires and the unpredictability of magical powers leaving readers amused by the peculiarities of human nature and the complexities of wishes gone awry

Ten Minute Stories Algernon Blackwood,2006-01-01 At the moorland cross roads Martin stood examining the sign post for several minutes in some bewilderment The names on the four arms were not what he expected distances were not given and his map he concluded with impatience must be hopelessly out of date Spreading it against the post he stooped to study it more closely The wind blew the corners flapping against his face The small print was almost indecipherable in the fading light It appeared however as well as he could make out that two miles back he must have taken the wrong turning He remembered that turning The path had looked inviting he had hesitated a moment then followed it caught by the usual lure of walkers that it might prove a short cut The short cut snare is old as human nature For some minutes he studied the sign post and the map alternately Dusk was falling and his knapsack had grown heavy He could not make the two guides tally however and a feeling of uncertainty crept over his mind He felt oddly baffled frustrated His thought grew thick Decision was most difficult I m muddled he thought I must be tired as at length he chose the most likely arm Sooner or later it will bring me to an inn though not the one I intended He accepted his walker s luck and started briskly The arm read Over Litacy Hill in small fine letters that danced and shifted every time he looked at them but the name was not discoverable on the map It was however inviting like the short cut A similar impulse again directed his choice Only this time it seemed more insistent almost urgent And he became aware then of the exceeding loneliness of the country about him The road for a hundred yards went straight then curved like a white river running into space the deep blue green of heather lined the banks spreading upwards through the twilight and occasional small pines stood solitary here and there all unexplained The curious adjective having made its appearance haunted him So many things that afternoon were similarly unexplained the short cut the darkened map the names on the sign post his own erratic impulses and the growing strange confusion that crept upon his spirit The entire country side needed explanation though perhaps interpretation was the truer word Those little lonely trees had made him see it Why had he lost his way so easily Why did he suffer vague impressions to influence his direction Why was he here exactly here And why did he go now over Litacy Hill Then by a green field that shone like a thought of daylight amid the darkness of the moor he saw a figure lying in the grass It was a blot upon the landscape a mere huddled patch of dirty rags yet with a certain horrid picturesqueness too and his mind though his German was of the schoolroom order at once picked out the German equivalents as against the English Lump and Lumpen flashed across his brain most oddly They seemed in that moment right and so expressive almost like onomatop ic words if that were possible of sight Neither rags nor rascal would have fitted what he saw The adequate description was in German
