Mendenhall,2019-07-15 In Rethinking Diabetes Emily Mendenhall investigates how global and local factors transform how diabetes is perceived experienced and embodied from place to place Mendenhall argues that the link between sugar and diabetes overshadows the ways in which underlying biological processes linking hunger oppression trauma unbridled stress and chronic mental distress produce diabetes The life history narratives in the book show how deeply embedded these factors are in the ways diabetes is experienced and re produced among poor communities around the world Rethinking Diabetes focuses on the stories of women living with diabetes near or below the poverty line in urban settings in the United States India South Africa and Kenya Mendenhall shows how women s experiences of living with diabetes cannot be dissociated from their social responsibilities of caregiving demanding family roles expectations and gendered experiences of violence that often displace their ability to care for themselves first These case studies reveal the ways in which a global story of diabetes overlooks the unique social political and cultural factors that produce syndemic diabetes differently across contexts From the case studies Rethinking Diabetes clearly provides some important parallels for scholars to consider significant social and economic inequalities health systems that are a mix of public and private with substandard provisions for low income patients and rising diabetes incidence and prevalence At the same time Mendenhall asks us to unpack how social cultural and epidemiological factors shape people s experiences and why we need to take these differences seriously when we think about what drives diabetes and how it affects the lives of the poor      Rutter's Child and Adolescent
