In classical analysis there is a vast difference between the class of problems that may be handled by means of the methods of calculus and the class of problems requiring combinatorial techniques With the advent of the digital computer the distinction begins to blur and with the increasing emphasis on problems involving optimization over structures the distinction vanishes What is necessary for the analytic and computational treatment of significant questions arising in modern control theory mathematical economics scheduling theory operations research bioengineering and so forth is a new and more flexible mathematical theory which subsumes both the classical continuous and discrete algorithms The work by HAMMER IVANESCU and RUDEANU on Boolean methods represents an important step in this direction and it is thus a great pleasure to welcome it into print It will certainly stimulate a great deal of additional research in both theory and application RICHARD BELLMAN University of Southern California FOF WO1      Design Methods for Digital Systems J. Thomas, 2013-06-29 The EMBO course on Formal Analysis of Genetic Regulation A course entitled Formal analysis of Genetic Regulation was held at the University of Brussels from 6 to 16 September 1977 under the auspices of EMBO European Molecular Biology Organization As indicated by the title of the book but not explicitly enough by the title of the course the main emphasis was put on a dynamic analysis of systems using logical methods that is methods in which functions and variables take only a limited number of values typically two In this respect this course was complementary to an EMBO course using continuous methods which was held some months later in Israel by Prof Segel People from four very different laboratories took an active part in teaching our course in Brussels Drs Anne LEUSSLER and Philippe VAN HAM from the Laboratory of Prof Jean FLORINE Laboratoire des Systemes logiques et numeriques Faculte des Sciences appliquees Universite Libre de Bruxelles Dr Stuart KAUFFMAN Dept of Biochemistry and Biophysics School of Medicine Philadelphia Prof Gregoire NICOLIS Service de Biophysique Theorique Faculte des Sciences Universite Libre de Bruxelles and his temporary coworker Dr David RIGNEY presently at the Center for Statistical Mechanics
