

Business Rescue & Survival Guide

Or how to close down your company the right way – if you do not want to explore continuation of trade options

Don't let problems creep up on you

It is rare that directors or business owners wake up one morning to find that disaster has suddenly struck. Financial problems tend to be insidious. Indications that something is wrong may be more obvious to others than they are to you.

When you are busy firefighting and juggling creditors it is understandable that you might fail to spot the warning signs. If you are in any doubt please consider the following warning signs. Invariably the earlier you seek help the more that can be done to help and recognising warning signs early will give you the best possible chance of avoiding insolvency.

If any of these factors apply to you.....

- Your business is running out of cash
- You are thinking of injecting emergency funding or perhaps giving a last chance PG
- You feel like your business is being run into the ground
- You are concerned you might unintentionally do something that could give rise to director disqualification
- Or if business pressures are getting you down

..... then contact us for advice. At an initial meeting suggestions to ease cashflow, how you could safely inject working capital, how to avoid wrongful trading as well as how to protect your entrepreneurial future can be discussed – but don't delay. If action is taken early there is often a good chance that your business can be saved. However, once decline has set in the chances of success become more remote and formal insolvency can end up being the only option.
