Surviving The Camps Volume No Xxiii:

Surviving the Camps Paul R. Bartrop, 2000-04-12 Based on accounts by survivors disputes Bruno Bettelheim's psychoanalytic individual oriented theory about prisoners submission to Nazi values Attributes survival in concentration camps to social activity which served individual needs without harming others Argues that group bonding was not appreciated by Bettelheim due to his approach and his selectivity of survivor accounts Draws on a more authoritative representative sample Chs 1 2 present a history of the camps and discuss how they were administered ch 3 uses survivor testimony to explain camp life chs 4 5 discuss the views of Bettelheim and his opponents chs 6 8 explore the concentration camp experience through the eyes of prisoners ch 9 presents conclusions about surviving in the camps

Surviving the Camps Paul R. Bartrop, 2000-04-12 Surviving the Camps is an intriguing study of life in the Nazi concentration camps during World War II Paul R Bartrop responds to earlier scholarly evaluations with the theory that the formation of a prisoner social system based on cooperation and mutual aid served as a positive force that to a substantial degree countered the structure imposed on the prisoners by the Nazis Bartrop concludes that only group solidarity could alleviate the problems of living in a social environment as extreme as the concentration camp Analyzing the testimonial accounts of many concentration camp survivors Surviving the Camps will be an excellent source for academic historians psychologists and professors of Jewish and Holocaust studies
