Matti Palo,Heidi Vanhanen,2012-12-06 This book addresses global and subnational issues concerning the world s forests societies and environment from an independent and non governmental point of view Cooperation on a global scale is not only commendable it is essential if solutions to the problems facing the world's forests are to be found. To achieve this modern science needs to draw a clearer picture of relationships between forests, human activity and the environment and of the consequences of environmental change for the societies' development and growth. There are several partly intermingled evolutionary forest transitions underway: the slow transition from forest area decrease to an increase in the North while deforestation and degradation continues in the South. Although not all deforestation is considered negative, serious social, economic and environmental costs may be associated with excessive deforestation. Deforestation control is just the first step on the stony path towards sustainable forest management. The forest management transition refers to the shift in the utilization towards managed semi-natural secondary forests and plantation forests. There are some signs in the North of the forest paradigm shift from sustainable yield to forest ecosystem concepts. How deforestation can be tackled and how these concurrent transitions are effected will have profound implications for the future. These processes involve several challenges with South-North dimensions. A search for an optimum mix of public policies and markets is a global priority both as a forest policy issue and as an inter-sectoral item on the political agenda. Deforestation and transition is discussed here by a team of 14 scientists from both the North and the South. This book offers knowledge, facts and information about world forests, society and environment to help us towards equity in our use of the global forest to create a clearer vision of a sustainable future.

Development Cooperation Policy in Forestry from an Analytical Perspective Peter Aurenhammer, 2012-08-14. Any reader eager to gain a comprehensive insight into forest development policy praxis and reality shouldn't miss this excellent publication. Hard to find a comparable reading where the author is digging as deep into Forest Development Policy. The author discovered numerous highly relevant theories as well as inspiring cases about forests and people from around the world focusing on change rather than development and on the role of various actors in creating or preventing change. The exciting results uncover reality and lead to inspiring discussions on concepts of development cooperation. All individual theoretical arguments and empirical proofs are well based and shed light into the political process of Forest Development Policy. The book is an essential contribution to scholarly debate and research on forestry in the South and its relations to development cooperation for both readers with theoretical and practice-related interests. Challenges in Managing Forest

Sustainability and Degradation in Less Developed Countries Sarah Lumley, 2018-02-06. This title was first published in 2002. The concept of sustainable development has increasingly gained currency as a policy determination tool, yet its interpretation and application is widely contested, especially with respect to the role of economics in the facilitation of environmentally and socially sustainable outcomes. Sarah Lumley assesses some of the fundamental assumptions of mainstream economic theory as part of an analysis of farmers' motives in adopting soil conservation on degraded lands in the Philippines. The text has a strong focus on the theoretical and practical interactions between environmental economic and social aspects of sustainable development it is both multidisciplinary and transdisciplinary and draws on conceptually important points of each discipline that it encompasses World Forests, Markets and Policies Matti Palo,J. Uusivuori,G. Mery,2012-12-06 In the 1990s the world community has arrived at a particularly in developing countries and in economic historical turning point Global issues the decline in biodiversity in transition These three organizations have of biological diversity climate change the fate of different backgrounds and focuses but have found forest peoples fresh water scarcity desertification it relevant and rewarding to their core operations to deforestation and forest degradation have come collaborate in WFSE activities The intention of to dominate the public and political debate about these organizations is to continue supporting the forestry In the economic sphere forest industries WFSE research and developing the mutual collaboration have assumed global dimensions oration The World Forests Society and Environment In the year 2000 WFSE took on a new challenge Research Program WFSE is a response by the re extending its research network to involve five new search community to this globalization The WFSE Associate Partners the Center for International slogan Globalization calls for global research re Forestry Research CIFOR in Indonesia the Center reflects both the means and the end of the program for Research and Higher Education on Natural The program is involved in promoting and executing Resources of Tropical America CATIE in Costa Rica conducting research in different parts of the world and the International Center for Research in Agro through its publications and communications network Forestry ICRAF in Kenya the World Forestry work linking researchers worldwide State of the World's Forests 2005 Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2005-01-01 This is the sixth edition of the biennial report on the current state of global forest resources and recent developments and emerging issues in the forest sector It includes contributions from key non governmental organisations and from individuals as well as articles written by FAO staff This edition focuses on options for sustainable forestry management to maximise the sector's economic viability and issues discussed include forest resources conservation aspects institutional issues and legal frameworks international policy developments the economic benefits of agroforestry wood energy production import tariffs and non tariff measures and the impact of violent conflicts on forest resources The Making of International Environmental Treaties Gerry Nagtzaam,2009 Gerry Nagtzaam contends that in recent decades neoliberal institutionalist scholarship on global environmental regimes has burgeoned as has constructivist scholarship on the key role played by norms in international politics In this innovative volume the author sets these interest and norm based approaches against each other in order to test their ability to illustrate why and how different environmental norms take hold in some regimes and not others The book explores why some global environmental treaties seek to preserve and protect some parts of nature from human utilization some seek to conserve certain parts of nature for human development whilst others allow the reckless exploitation of nature without accounting for the consequences It tracks the fate of these three underlying environmental norms preservation conservation and exploitation using case studies on Climate change for forest policy-makers Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2019-02-18 The critical role of forests in climate change mitigation and adaptation is now widely recognized Forests contribute significantly to climate change mitigation through their carbon sink and carbon storage functions They play an essential role in reducing vulnerabilities and enhancing adaptation of people and ecosystems to climate change and climate variability the negative impacts of which are becoming increasingly evident in many parts of the world In many countries climate change issues have not been fully addressed in national forest policies forestry mitigation and adaptation needs at national level have not been thoroughly considered in national climate change strategies and cross sectoral dimensions of climate change impacts and response measures have not been fully appreciated This publication seeks to provide a practical approach to the process of integrating climate change into national forest programmes The aim is to assist senior officials in government administrations and the representatives of other stakeholders including civil society organizations and the private sector prepare the forest sector for the challenges and opportunities posed by climate change This document complements a set of guidelines prepared by FAO in 2013 to support forest managers incorporate climate change considerations into forest management plans and practices

Private or Socialistic Forestry? Matti Palo, Erkki Lehto, 2012-02-15 While deforestation continues at an alarming rate around the world discussions on the range of underlying causes continue The premise is that studying successful transitions from deforestation to sustainable forestry ex post in Finland can provide novel insights into how deforestation in the tropics might be reduced in the future Our fundamental question here is why Finland succeeded to stop deforestation for a century ago and why not the same is feasible in the contemporary tropical countries This book presents a novel integrated theory within which this case study on Finland and contemporary modeling of underlying causes of tropical deforestation are developed Finland remains the world's second largest net exporter of forest products while maintaining the highest forest cover in Europe A transition from deforestation to sustainable industrial forestry took place in Finland during the first part of the 20th century The underlying causes of this transition are compared via our theory with deforestation in 74 contemporary tropical countries Both appear similar and support our theory The interaction of public policies and market institutions has appeared to be critical during this transition The study's findings suggest that private forest ownership with a continuous increase in the real value of forests and alleviation of poverty under non corruptive conditions has been a necessary but not a sufficient condition for this transition In a parallel way public policies have also proved to be a necessary but not sufficient condition in this transition The conclusion is that socialistic forestry along with corruption is artificially maintaining too low values in the tropical forests The opportunity cost of sustainable forestry remains too high and deforestation by extensification of agriculture therefore continues The prevailing socialistic forestry with dominating public forest ownership is by purpose maintaining administratively set low stumpage prices leading to low value of forests wide corruption and continuous forest degradation and deforestation An effective remedy to raise the value of forests is found to be within forestry Forests and Rural Development Jürgen Pretzsch,Dietrich Darr,Holm Ubrig,Eckhard Auch,2014-01-21 This book provides an overview of the complex challenges and opportunities related to forest based rural development in the tropics and subtropics Applying a socio ecological perspective the book traces the changing paradigms of forestry in rural development throughout history summarizes the major aspects of the rural development challenge in forest areas and documents innovative approaches in fields such as land utilization technology and organizational development rural advisory services financing mechanisms participative planning and forest governance It brings together scholars and practitioners dealing with the topics from various theoretical and practical angles Calling for an approach that carefully balances market forces with government intervention the book shows that forests in rural areas have the potential to provide a solid foundation for a green global economy
