return to California to mine gold for the Church Although Bigler never intended to publish his diaries their significance emerged after his article in the San Francisco Bulletin in 1870 drew the attention of historian Hubert Howe Bancroft Bigler subsequently wrote an extended journal for Bancroft forming the Bancroft Version which became the most complete and cohesive account of the critical years from 1846 to 1848 This version now preserved in the Bancroft Library serves as the core of his historical narrative Bigler s diaries exist in several forms each contributing to the preservation of his story The Huntington Version stored in the Huntington Library offers detailed but fragmented entries due to damage and its use as a scrapbook The Hittell Version revised and published with historian John Shertzer Hittell in 1885 highlights Bigler s meticulous recollection of the discovery of gold including his correction of Marshall s date of January 19 to January 24 1848 In 1898 Bigler copied his diaries into a leather bound Ledger Version now housed in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter day Saints archives Additional fragments such as the Day Book and Huntington Fragment provide further glimpses into his observations These various versions underscore the literary and historical significance of Bigler s work offering detailed firsthand insights into pivotal moments in the history of California the Mormon movement and the American West This title is part of UC Press s Voices Revived program which commemorates University of California Press s mission to seek out and cultivate the brightest minds and give them voice reach and impact Drawing on a backlist dating to 1893 Voices Revived makes high quality peer reviewed scholarship accessible once again using print on demand technology This title was originally published in 1962

The Gold Crusades Douglas Fetherling, 1997-12-15 Among the hordes of starry eyed argonauts who flocked to the California gold rush of 1849 was an Australian named Edward Hargraves He left America empty handed only to find gold in his own backyard The result was the great Australian rush of the 1850s which also attracted participants from around the world A South African named P J Marais was one of them Marais too returned home in defeat only to set in motion the diamond and gold rushes that transformed southern Africa And so it went Most previous historians of the gold rushes have tended to view them as acts of spontaneous nationalism Each country likes to see its own gold rush as the one that either shaped those that followed or epitomized all the rest In The Gold Crusades A Social History of Gold Rushes 1849 1929 Douglas Fetherling takes a different approach Fetherling argues that the gold rushes in the United States Canada Australia New Zealand and South Africa shared the same causes and results the same characters and characteristics He posits that they were in fact a single discontinuous event an expression of the British imperial experience and nineteenth century liberalism He does so with dash and style and with a sharp eye for the telling anecdote the out of the way document and the bold connection between seemingly unrelated disciplines Originally published by Macmillan of Canada 1988
