Social movements and collective behavior: an integration of meta-analysis and systematic review of social psychology studies

Background: The impact of social movements (SMs) and collective behavior (CB) supports the relevance of approaching this phenomenon from social psychology. Several systematic reviews (10) and meta-analyses (6) have been carried out in the 21st century, but there is a lack of integration.

Aim: This study seeks to review the patterns of CB and corroborate the psychosocial factors that explain participation in CB and SMs, as well as the long-term psychological effects of participating in them.

Method: A systematic search was carried out in the databases Web of Science, Scopus, ProQuest, ScienceDirect, Wiley Online Library, EBSCO, and JSTOR for articles dated between 1969 and 2022. We searched for meta-analyses and systematic reviews that empirically evaluated social movements and collective behavior. Of the 494 initial records, after scanning and eligibility phases, 16 meta-analyses and systematic reviews were analyzed in the present work.

Results: The evidence reviewed shows that participation in collective gatherings and CB are common. A cross-cultural survey suggests that collective gatherings are mostly of a leisure type, to a lesser extent religious and sporting, and to an even lesser extent, demonstrations and large religious rites. World Value surveys found that one to three persons out of 10 participate in protests or CB related to SMs and four out of 10 movements achieved some kind of success. Studies challenged that CBs were characterized by unanimity of beliefs, identification and behavior, generalized excitement, as well as mass panic and riot after catastrophes. Only two out of 10 CB are violent. Meta-analysis and systematic reviews confirm that participation in CB and SMs was associated with (a) intergroup conflict and realistic threat ( $r = 0.30$ ); (b) positive attitudes, expectations, or agreement with goals or collective motive ( $r = 0.44$ ); (c) cognitive fraternal relative deprivation ( $r = 0.25$ ); (d) collective efficacy ( $r = 0.36$ ); (e) collective identity ( $r = 0.34$ ); (f) emotions and affective relative deprivation ( $r = 0.35$ ); (g) moral conviction and threat to moral ( $r = 0.29$ ); and (h) disagreement with system justification belief ( $r = -0.26$ ). Participation in successful CB and SMs provokes positive changes in emotions, social identity and social relationships, values and beliefs, and empowerment, as well as negative effects such as depression, stress, burnout, and disempowerment related to the failures of SMs.

Systematic Social Psychology William S. Sahakian, 1974      Dual-process Theories in Social Psychology Shelly Chaiken, Yaacov Trope, 1999-02-19 This informative volume presents the first comprehensive review of research and theory on dual process models of social information processing These models distinguish between qualitatively different modes of information processing in making decisions and solving problems e g associative versus rule based controlled versus uncontrolled and affective versus cognitive modes Leading contributors review the basic assumptions of these approaches and review the ways they have been applied and tested in such areas as attitudes stereotyping person perception memory and judgment Also examined are the relationships between different sets of processing modes the factors that determine their utilization and how they work in combination to affect responses to social information      Blackwell Handbook of Social Psychology Rupert Brown, Sam Gaertner, 2008-04-15 This volume will provide an authoritative state of the art overview of the field of intergroup processes The volume is divided into nine major sections on cognition motivation emotion communication and social influence changing intergroup relations social comparison self identity methods and applications Provides an authoritative state of the art overview of the field of intergroup processes Divided into nine major sections on cognition motivation emotion communication and social influence changing intergroup relations social comparison self identity methods and applications Written by leading researchers in the field Referenced throughout and include post chapter annotated bibliographies so readers can access original research articles in order to further their study Now available in full text online via xreferplus the award winning reference library on the web from xrefer For more information visit www.xreferplus.com      Blackwell Handbook of Social Psychology Michael A. Hogg, Scott Tindale, 2008-04-15 This handbook provides an authoritative up to date overview of the social psychology of group processes The topics covered include group decisions juries group remembering roles status leadership social identity and group membership socialization group performance negotiation and bargaining emotion and mood computer mediated communication organizations and mental health Provides an authoritative up to date overview of the social psychology of group processes Written by leading researchers from around the world to provide a classic and current overview of research as well as providing a description of future trends within the area Includes coverage of group decisions juries group remembering roles status leadership social identity and group membership socialization group performance negotiation and bargaining emotion and mood computer mediated communication organizations and mental health Essential reading for any serious scholar of group behavior Now available in full text online via xreferplus the award winning reference library on the web from xrefer For more information visit www.xreferplus.com      The Handbook of Social Psychology Gardner Lindzey, Elliot Aronson, 1968      History as a Science and the System of the Sciences Thomas M. Seebom, 2015-04-09 This volume goes beyond presently available phenomenological analyses based on the structures and constitution of the lifeworld It shows how the science of history is the mediator between the human and the natural sciences It demonstrates that the distinction between interpretation and explanation does not imply a strict separation of the natural and the human sciences Finally it shows that the natural sciences and technology are inseparable but that technology is one sidedly founded in pre scientific encounters with reality in the lifeworld In positivism the natural sciences are sciences because they offer causal explanations testable in experiments and the humanities are human sciences only if they use methods of the natural sciences For epistemologists following Dilthey the human sciences presuppose interpretation and the human and natural sciences must be separated There is phenomenology interested in psychology and the social sciences that distinguish the natural and the human sciences but little can be found about the historical human sciences This volume fills the gap by presenting analyses of the material foundations of the understanding of expressions of other persons and of primordial recollections and expectations founding explicit expectations and predictions in the lifeworld Next it shows on the basis of history as applying philological methods in interpretations of sources the role of a universal spatio temporal framework for reconstructions and causal explanations of what has really happened
