The Yiddish Presence in European Literature Joseph Sherman, 2017-12-02 Early in the twentieth century Yiddish previously stigmatized as a corrupt jargon came to be recognized as a language in its own right and one moreover that was already the vehicle for a rich literature Many writers in other European languages steadily became aware of the status and richness of the Yiddish language sometimes by encountering Yiddish speaking communities in Eastern Europe and they responded to Yiddish language and culture in their own works while Yiddish writers adopted and sometimes anticipated modern trends in other European literatures known to them The collection of papers in this volume examines some of these fruitful interactions between Yiddish and the European literary tradition ranging from the early nineteenth century to the present from France to Lithuania and from classic modernist writers such as Kafka to Imre Kertesz Nobel

Cornis-Pope, John Neubauer, 2010-09-29 Types and stereotypes is the fourth and last volume of a path breaking multinational literary history that incorporates innovative features relevant to the writing of literary history in general Instead of offering a traditional chronological narrative of the period 1800 1989 the History of the Literary Cultures of East Central Europe approaches the region s literatures from five complementary angles focusing on literature s participation in and reaction to key political events literary periods and genres the literatures of cities and sub regions literary institutions and figures of representation The main objective of the project is to challenge the self enclosure of national literatures in traditional literary histories to contextualize them in a regional perspective and to recover individual works writers and minority literatures that national histories have marginalized or ignored Types and stereotypes brings together articles that rethink the figures of National Poets figurations of the Family Women Outlaws and Others as well as figures of Trauma and Mediation As in the previous three volumes the historical and imaginary figures discussed here constantly change and readjust to new political and social conditions An Epilogue complements the basic history focusing on the contradictory transformations of East Central European literary cultures after 1989 This volume will be of interest to the region s literary historians to students and teachers of comparative literature to cultural historians and to the general public interested in exploring the literatures of a rich and resourceful cultural region Az értelmzés szükségessége Scheibner, Tamás, Szűcs, Zoltán

Bradatan, 2013-09-13 Philosophy Society and the Cunning of History in Eastern Europe charts the intellectual landscape of twentieth century East Central Europe under the unifying theme of precariousness as a mode of historical existence Caught between empires often marked by catastrophic historic events and grand political failures the countries of East Central Europe have for a long time developed a certain intellectual self representation a culture that not only helps them make some sense of such misfortunes but also protects them somehow from a collapse into nihilism An interdisciplinary study of this sophisticated culture of survival and endurance has been long overdue Not only is it charming and worth studying in its own right but with the re integration of the new Europe into the old one and the emergence on the Western European intellectual scene of many authors from the East such a culture will also shape the European mind of the 21st century This volume decodes and explores this culture of precariousness from the complementary angles of philosophy political theory intellectual history and literary studies Expert contributors look at a wide range of topics from philosophical martyrdom to collective suffering to geographical fatalism and explore the works of key authors in the field including Cioran Ko akowski Kert sz Bauman and i ek This book was originally published as a special issue of Angelaki The Journal of the Theoretical Humanities

After Memory Matthias Schwartz,Nina Weller,Heike Winkel,2021-06-08 Even seventy five years after the end of World War II the commemorative cultures surrounding the War and the Holocaust in Central Eastern and South Eastern Europe are anything but fixed The fierce debates on how to deal with the past among the newly constituted nation states in these regions have already received much attention by scholars in cultural and memory studies The present volume posits that literature as a medium can help us understand the shifting attitudes towards World War II and the Holocaust in post Communist Europe in recent years These shifts point to new commemorative cultures shaping up after memory Contemporary literary representations of World War II and the Holocaust in Eastern Europe do not merely extend or replace older practices of remembrance and testimony but reflect on these now defunct or superseded narratives New narratives of remembrance are conditioned by a fundamentally new social and political context one that emerged from the devaluation of socialist commemorative rituals and as a response to the loss of private and family memory narratives The volume offers insights into the diverse literatures of Eastern Europe and their ways of depicting the area s contested heritage

(Re)visualizing National History Robin Ostow,2008-01-01 The role of the museum is a contentious one The last fifteen years have seen scholars point to ways in which states particularly imperial states use museums as sites to showcase looted treasure to document their geographic expansion to present the state as the guardian of the national treasure and to educate citizens and subjects This period has also seen a great deal of attention paid to the reshaping of national histories and values in the wake of the collapse of the Communist bloc and the emergence of the European Union Re Visualizing National History brings these two streams of scholarship together treating the wave of monument and museum building in Europe as part of an attempt to forge consensus in politically unified but deeply divided nations The essays in this collection explore the ways in which museums exhibit new national values and equally important how the realization of these new museums and new exhibits in older museums reflects the search for a new consensus among different generational groups in Europe and in North America The approach of the volume is deliberately interdisciplinary The contributors come from a variety of countries in Europe and North America speaking from the perspectives of cultural studies history art history anthropology and sociology as well as museum studies
