Encyclopedia of Political Communication Lynda Lee Kaid, Christina Holtz-Bacha, 2008. Political communication began with the earliest studies of democratic discourse by Aristotle and Plato. However, modern political communication relies on an interdisciplinary base which draws on concepts from communication, political science, journalism, sociology, psychology, history, rhetoric, and others. This two-volume resource considers political communication from a broad interdisciplinary perspective encompassing the many different roles that communication plays in political processes in the United States and around the world. The Encyclopedia of Political Communication discusses the major theoretical approaches to the field, including direct and limited effects theories, agenda setting theories, sociological theories, framing and priming theories, and other past and present conceptualizations. With nearly 600 entries, this resource pays considerable attention to important political messages such as political speeches, televised political advertising, political posters, and print advertising, televised political debates, and Internet sites. The audiences for political communications are also central, necessitating concentration on citizen reactions to political messages, how the general public and voters in democratic systems respond to political messages, and the effects of all types of media and message types. Key Features: Encompasses several channels of political communication, including interpersonal and public communication, radio, television, newspapers, and the World Wide Web. Provides news media coverage and journalistic analysis of politics, political issues, political figures, and political institutions. Concentrates on the field of political communication since the middle of the 20th century. Emphasizes political communication from the point of view of the United States, but there is substantial and important research and scholarship on political communication in international contexts. Considers the role of communication in governing, incorporating communication activities that influence the operation of executive, legislative, and judicial bodies, political parties, interest groups, political action committees, and other participants in political processes. Key Themes: Biographies, Books, Films, Journals, Television, Democracy, Democratization, Education, and Walford's Guide to Reference Material: Generalia, language and literature, the arts Albert John Walford, Marilyn Mullan, Priscilla Schlicke, Library Association, 1996. From its first edition the purpose of Walford has been to identify and evaluate the widest possible range of reference materials. No rigid definition of reference is applied. In addition to the expected bibliographies, indexes, dictionaries, encyclopaedias and directories, a number of important textbooks and manuals of general practice are included. While the majority of the items are books, Walford is a guide to reference material. Thus periodical articles, microforms, online and CD-ROM sources are all represented. In this volume a particular effort has been made to improve coverage of the latter two categories.

The Media Revolution of Early Christianity Doron Mendels, 1999. Respected historian Doron Mendels poses a daring new theory that Eusebius's monumental Ecclesiastical History 325 C.E. was meant to serve as a publicity tool to further the cause of early Christianity. Reading The Ecclesiastical History through the lenses of modern media studies, Mendels argues that Eusebius viewed the spread of Christianity as a media revolution and invented a new type of history writing, media history, to promote it. By carefully examining Eusebius's methods, Mendels shows that Eusebius worked much like modern journalists do in selecting, shaping and presenting stories for popular consumption.
