

The overall architectural expression is carried through by an image or an idea. In the realization of the very contained task of building, it's imperative to preserve the craftsmanship and the detailing in something meaningful. For that reason, one is at all times open to solving the practical matters in such a way as to make them consistent parts of the architectural whole. These sketches deal with the junction of gutter and eaves, - ventilation and water draining. A new gutter that sets off the decision that go from wall to roof, thus making the gutter an element of its own. - After the old English custom.

A large fireplace for a big house, the first sketch made at the speed of lightning to leave the impression on site. The size of a stamp. The next step is to enlarge it in the photo-copy to a scale of 1 to 20, followed by precise drawing and adding of measures for the contractor, - a working drawing put in a set form. On site you have to act as if you mean it seriously. A figure with a fireplace and a TV set behind a mark. - On design and the impulse of the moment.
