The Influence Of Middle Minoan Pottery On The Cyclades Studies In Mediterranean Archaeology Literature:

The Influence of Middle Minoan Pottery on the Cyclades Angelia G. Papagiannopoulou, 1991 Beyond Thalassocracies Evi Gorogianni, Peter Pavuk, Luca Girella, 2016-08-31 Beyond Thalassocracies aims to evaluate and rethink the manner in which archaeologists approach understand and analyze the various processes associated with culture change connected to interregional contact using as a test case the world of the Aegean during the Late Bronze Age c 1600 1100 BC The 14 chapters compare and contrast various aspects of the phenomena of Minoanisation and Mycenaeanisation both of which share the basic underlying defining feature of material culture change in communities around the Aegean This change was driven by trends manifesting themselves in the dominant palatial communities of each period of the Bronze Age Over the past decade our understanding of how these processes developed and functioned has changed considerably Whereas current discussions on Minoanisation have already been informed by more recent theoretical trends especially in material culture studies and post colonial theory the process of Mycenaeanisation is still very much conceptualized along traditional lines of explanation Since these phenomena occurred in chronological sequence it makes sense that any reappraisal of their nature and significance should target those regions of the Aegean basin that were affected by both processes highlighting their similarities and differences Thus in the present volume we focus on the southern and eastern Aegean in particular the Cyclades Dodecanese and the north eastern Aegean islands An Island Archaeology of the Early Cyclades Cyprian Broodbank, 2002-07-18 A case study of the Greek Cyclades documenting new ways of studying global island archaeology

The Cambridge Prehistory of the Bronze and Iron Age Mediterranean A. Bernard Knapp, Peter van Dommelen, 2015-01-12 The Cambridge Prehistory of the Bronze and Iron Age Mediterranean offers new insights into the material and social practices of many different Mediterranean peoples during the Bronze and Iron Ages presenting in particular those features that both connect and distinguish them Contributors discuss in depth a range of topics that motivate and structure Mediterranean archaeology today including insularity and connectivity mobility migration and colonization hybridization and cultural encounters materiality memory and identity community and household life and death and ritual and ideology The volume s broad coverage of different approaches and contemporary archaeological practices will help practitioners of Mediterranean archaeology to move the subject forward in new and dynamic ways Together the essays in this volume shed new light on the people ideas and materials that make up the world of Mediterranean archaeology today beyond the borders that separate Europe Africa and the Middle East Landscape and Land Use in Postglacial Greece Paul Halstead, Charles Frederick, 2000-12-01 Collaboration between prehistorians and palaeoecologists is radically changing our understanding of the relationship between landscape land use and human settlement in Greece The chapters in this volume include case studies and broader syntheses developments of both on site and off site field methodology explorations of palaeoecological and archaeological evidence and discussions of how the palaeoecological and archaeological records are formed Contributions range geographically over the contrasting natural and cultural landscapes of northern and southern Greece and the lowlands and highlands and chronologically over the whole postglacial period including studies of plant and animal ecology and of palaeoecological formation processes in the present The difficulty of disentangling climatic and anthropogenic causes of palaeoecological change is a recurrent theme Proceedings of the First International Minoanisation Joanne Elizabeth Cutler,2021-10-31 The mid second millennium BC material record of the southern Aegean shows evidence of strong Cretan influence This phenomenon has traditionally been seen in terms of Minoanisation but the nature and degree of Cretan influence and the process processes by which it was spread and adopted have been widely debated This new study addresses the question of Minoanisation through a study of the adoption of Cretan technologies in the wider southern Aegean principally weaving technology By the early Late Bronze Age Cretan style discoid loom weights had appeared at a number of settlements across the southern Aegean In most cases this represents not only the adoption of a particular type of loom weight but also the introduction of a new weaving technology the use of the warp weighted loom The evidence for and the implications of the adoption of this new technology is examined Drawing upon recent advances in textile experimental archaeology the types of textiles that are likely to have been produced at a range of sites both on Crete itself and in the wider southern Aegean are discussed and the likely nature and scale of textile production at the various settlements is assessed A consideration of the evidence for the timing and extent of the adoption of Cretan weaving technology in the light of additional evidence for the adoption of other Cretan technologies is used to gain insight into the potential social and economic strategies engaged in by various groups across the southern Aegean as well as the motivations that may have driven the adoption and adaptation of Cretan cultural traits and accompanying behaviors By examining how technological skills and techniques are learned and considering possible mechanisms for the transmission of such technical knowledge and know how new perspectives can be proposed concerning the processes through which Cretan techniques were taken up and imitated abroad Thera and the Aegean World III: Archaeology David A.
