modernity possibilities and ultimately provided a model for Korea's pre-colonial and colonial modernity. This book explores the way in which modern Korea perceived its geographic neighbours from the 1890s until 1945. It shows that Korea's modern nationalism was at the same time internationalist in its orientation as the vision of Korea's ideal place in the world and brighter national future was often linked to the examples positive and negative threats perceived and real and allies abroad. Exploring the importance of the international knowledge and experience for the formation of the Korean nationalist paradigms, it offers nuance to the existing picture of the international connections and environment of the Korean national movements. It shows that the picture of Japan inside the anti-Japanese independence movement of the colonial period was more complicated than simple hatred of the invaders; modern achievements of Japan were admired even by anti-colonial nationalists as a possible model for Korea. The book also demonstrates the extent to which Chinese and Soviet revolutions influenced the thinking of modern Korean intellectuals across the whole ideological spectrum. Introducing new sources presented in English for the first time and including themes such as race and ethnicity, global revolution and gender, this book will be of great interest to students and scholars of Korean, East Asian and Russian history as well as historians of the colonial modern era more generally.

The Emplantation of Catholicism in Pre-modern Korea Kevin N. Cawley, 2025-02-06

Tracing the development of Catholic ideas in Japan and China during the late sixteenth and early seventeenth century, this book provides an overview of the evolution of the missionary strategy in East Asia while focusing on the early emplantation of Catholicism in Korea. Kevin Cawley recreates the tumultuous period for gender relations and explores interreligious interactions between Confucians and Catholics. Highlighting the textual production of this period, inspired by this book, it examines writings such as the catechism of the Italian Jesuit Matteo Ricci (1552-1610) which went on to convert a group of elite Confucian scholars to the new religion. It also underscores the importance of the vernacular catechism written by Chong Yakchong (1760-1801), a convert from a prominent Confucian family who was eventually executed. Chong's text made Catholicism easily understandable for women as well as men from lower social classes who eventually converted in significant numbers, effecting real social change. Outlining the shift from rejection to acceptance of new texts composed by early Korean converts, this book explores emergent Catholicism in Japan, China and Korea as well as the various challenges encountered and how the mission strategy changed as a result. Exploring gender relations both in relation to Confucianism and Catholics during this period, this book provides insight into this previously under-researched aspect of East Asian Catholicism. In this study, we learn how religious persecution and political tactics manipulated, terrified and exterminated converts to Catholicism. From European Jesuits to Korean Confucians, this book outlines a fascinating journey of intercultural engagement between Western and Eastern worldviews.
