ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS - CHAPTER 5

1. Accounts receivable are the expected future receipts that arise when a company permits its customers to buy now and pay later. The amounts are usually small with a short term to maturity. Notes Receivable have longer terms to maturity and are usually for larger amounts. The note specifies the maturity date, interest rate, and other credit terms.
2. The net realizable value is the amount expected to be collected from accounts receivable. It is the face value of receivables less an allowance for estimated uncollectible accounts.
3. Allowance for Doubtful Accounts is a contra asset account.
4. Estimating uncollectible accounts expense improves the accuracy of financial statements by (1) reporting expected realizable value of receivables (i.e., future cash flows) and (2) presenting a better matching of expenses with related revenues. This provides a better measure of managerial performance.
5. When using the allowance method, uncollectible accounts expense is matched with current revenues. A company does not know which accounts will not be collectible at the time a sale is made; consequently, in order to record the expense currently, an estimate is used.
6. The most common format for reporting accounts receivable on the balance sheet is gross receivables less the allowance for doubtful accounts. This format allows the users to see both the total amount owed by the customers and the amount the company expects to collect.

Survey Of Accounting 4th Edition:

Management Accounting, 4th Edition Leslie G. Eldenburg, Albie Brooks, Judy Oliver, Gillian Vesty, Rodney Dormer, Vijaya Murthy, Nick Pawsey, 2020-01-21 Eldenburg's fourth edition of Management Accounting combines the basic technical issues associated with cost management, management accounting and control with more recent and emerging themes and issues. Management Accounting is a compulsory element of the accounting major and this text is written to cover the content typically taught in the two management accounting units offered in most accounting programs. The Management Accounting interactive e-text features a range of instructional media content designed to provide students with an engaging learning experience. This includes case videos, interactive problems and questions with immediate feedback. Eldenburg's unique resource can also form the basis of a blended learning solution for lecturers.

Intangible Values in Financial Accounting and Reporting Stephan Grüber, 2014-07-18 Academics and practitioners argue that intangible values have become significant value drivers of today's economy. Major production inputs no longer comprise of property plant and equipment but rather of brands, knowledge and other technological innovation. Based on this notion, information on such phenomena is supposedly crucial for existing and potential capital providers in making decisions whether to allocate resources to a company. This thesis examines the information use and needs of financial analysts with respect to intangible values. The purpose is to shed light on the usefulness of such information from the perspective of one of the primary user groups of IFRSs.
