National Culture and the New Global System Frederick Buell,1994-09 The three worlds theory is perhaps still the basis for our dominant assumptions about geopolitical and geocultural order writes Frederick Buell but its hold on our imagination and faith is passing fast In its place a startlingly different model the notion that the world is somehow interconnected into a single system has emerged expressing the perception that global relationships constitute not three separate worlds but a single network In the wake of disillusionment with anticolonial nationalism and in response to a wide variety of economic political demographic and technological changes Buell argues we have come increasingly to view the world as complexly interconnected In National Culture and the New Global System he considers how the notion of national culture has been conceived and reconceived in the postwar period For much of the period the three world theory provided economic political and cultural models for mapping a world of nation states More recently new notions of interconnectedness have been developed ones that have had profound and sometimes startling effects on cultural production and theory Surveying recent cultural history and theory Buell shows how our understanding of cultural production relates closely to transformations in models of the world order
