corpus of John Chrysostom has received renewed attention in recent years as a source for the wider cultural and historical context within which his sermons were preached. Scholars have demonstrated the exciting potential his sermons have to shed light on aspects of daily life, popular attitudes and practices of lay piety. In short, Chrysostom's sermons have been recognised as a valuable source for the study of popular Christianity at the end of the fourth century. This study, however, questions the validity of some recent conclusions. James Daniel Cook illustrates that Chrysostom is often seen as at odds with the congregations to whom he preached. On this view, the Christianity of elites such as Chrysostom had made little inroads into popular thought beyond the fairly superficial, and congregations were still living with older, more culturally traditional views about religious beliefs which preachers were doing their utmost to overcome. Cook argues that such a portrayal is based on a misreading of Chrysostom's sermons and fails to explain satisfactorily the apparent popularity that Chrysostom enjoyed as a preacher. Preaching and Popular Christianity: Reading the Sermons of John Chrysostom reassesses how we read Chrysostom's sermons with a particular focus on the stern language which permeated his preaching and on which the image of the contrary congregation is largely based. In doing this, Cook recovers a neglected portrayal of Chrysostom as a pastor and of preaching as a pastoral and liturgical activity, and it becomes clear that his use of critical language says more about how he understood his role as preacher than about the nature of popular Christianity in late antique society. Thus, a very different picture of late antique Christianity emerges in which Chrysostom's congregations are more willing to listen and learn from their preacher than is often assumed.

Dynamic Islam Jon Armajani, 2004. Dynamic Islam analyzes the lives and works of four of the most influential liberal diaspora Muslim intellectuals of the late twentieth and early twenty-first centuries: Fatima Mernissi, Leila Ahmed, Fazlur Rahman, and Mohammed Arkoun. These prolific scholars are among the first generation of Muslims writing in Western languages who have intentionally directed their works toward audiences in the West as well as the Muslim world. Jon Armajani examines the way these cutting-edge scholars have interpreted the Quran, Hadith, and Islamic history as they have constructed their visions for Islam in the modern world. Armajani vividly describes their perspectives on women and gender, veiling, Islamic revivalism, Islam and democracy, and Islamic mysticism. The volume also situates their ideas with respect to conservatively minded western Muslims and Islamic revivalists.

Transforming Congregations through Community Boyung Lee, 2013-11-11. In this helpful book, Boyung Lee offers an encouraging vision of the mainline church's future. Lee grapples with some of the greatest challenges facing the mainline church, offering compelling responses to recurring questions: What does faithfulness to the gospel look like in this changing world? What is our distinctive voice in the larger society? How does theological education have to change if it is to serve the needs of a new century? Lee argues that the church's future is a promising one if the church can offer a richer and deeper definition of community, one that moves beyond the excessive individualism of western culture and that helps mainline Christians understand their solidarity with one another and with all of God's people. Lee further explores the crucial role of faith formation at the congregational and seminary levels More than mere schooling theological education must engage all aspects of educators and students lives to prepare seminarians for the challenges that lie ahead While not dismissing the mainline church s challenges Lee offers congregational leaders and seminary educators a vision of a church transformed for the 21st century Beyond Heaven and Earth Gabriel Levy,2022-02-08 An approach to understanding religion that draws on both humanities and natural science but rejects approaches that employ simple monisms and radical dualisms In Beyond Heaven and Earth Gabriel Levy argues that collective religious narratives and beliefs are part of nature they are the basis for the formation of the narratives and beliefs of individuals Religion grows out of the universe but to make sense of it we have to recognize the paradox that the universe is both mental and material or neither We need both humanities and natural science approaches to study religion and religious meaning Levy contends but we must also recognize the limits of these approaches First we must make the dominant metaphysics that undergird the various disciplines of science and humanities more explicit and second we must reject those versions of metaphysics that maintain simple monisms and radical dualisms Bringing Donald Davidson s philosophy a form of pragmatism known as anomalous monism to bear on religion Levy offers a blueprint for one way that the humanities and natural sciences can have a mutually respectful dialogue Levy argues that in order to understand religions we have to take their semantic content seriously We need to rethink such basic concepts as narrative fiction information agency creativity technology and intimacy In the course of his argument Levy considers the relation between two closely related semantics fiction and religion and outlines a new approach to information He then applies his theory to discrete cases ancient texts modern media and intimacy Memorializing the Holocaust Janet Jacobs,2010-07-30 How do collective memories of histories of violence and trauma in war and genocide come to be created Janet Jacobs offers new understandings of this crucial issue in her examination of the representation of gender in the memorial culture of Holocaust monuments and museums from synagogue memorials and other historical places of Jewish life to the geographies of Auschwitz Majdanek and Ravensbruck Jacobs travelled to Holocaust sites across Europe to explore representations of women She reveals how these memorial cultures construct masculinity and femininity as well as the Holocaust s effect on stereotyping on grounds of race or gender She also uncovers the wider ways in which images of violence against women have become universal symbols of mass trauma and genocide This feminist analysis of Holocaust memorialization brings together gender and collective memory with the geographies of genocide to fill a significant gap in our understanding of genocide and national remembrance

Hidden Heritage Janet Jacobs,2002-09-16 This study of contemporary crypto Jews descendants of European Jews forced to convert to Christianity during the Spanish Inquisition traces the group s history of clandestinely conducting their faith and their present day efforts to reclaim their past Janet Liebman Jacobs masterfully combines historical and social scientific theory to fashion a brilliant analysis of hidden ancestry and the transformation of religious and ethnic identity Liturgical Perspectives: Prayer and Poetry in Light of the Dead Sea Scrolls Esther G. Chazon,Ruth Clements,Avital
