with colour and their sincerity at times even their naïveté was combined with subtle observation of the Normandy shore's variable nature. At this time Monet's landscapes were not yet characterized by great richness of colour. Rather they recalled the tonalities of paintings by the Barbizon artists and Boudin's seascapes. He composed a range of colour based on yellow, brown or blue-grey. At the Third Impressionist Exhibition in 1877 Monet presented a series of paintings for the first time: seven views of the Saint Lazare train station. He selected them from among twelve he had painted at the station. This motif in Monet's work is in line not only with Manet's Chemin de fer (The Railway) and with his own landscapes featuring trains and stations at Argenteuil but also with a trend that surfaced after the railways first began to appear. In 1883 Monet had bought a house in the village of Giverny near the little town of Vernon. At Giverny series painting became one of his chief working procedures. Meadows became his permanent workplace. When a journalist who had come from Vernon to interview Monet asked him where his studio was the painter answered: 'My studio? I've never had a studio and I can't see why one would lock oneself up in a room. To draw, yes, to paint, no.' Then, broadly gesturing towards the Seine, the hills and the silhouette of the little town, he declared: 'There's my real studio.' Monet began to go to London in the last decade of the nineteenth century. He began all his London paintings working directly from nature but completed many of them afterwards at Giverny. The series formed an indivisible whole and the painter had to work on all his canvases at one time. A friend of Monet's, the writer Octave Mirbeau, wrote that he had accomplished a miracle. With the help of colours he had succeeded in recreating on the canvas something almost impossible to capture: he was reproducing sunlight, enriching it with an infinite number of reflections. Alone among the impressionists, Claude Monet took an almost scientific study of the possibilities of colour to its limits; it is unlikely that one could have gone any further in that direction.
