Emerging Technologies and International Security Reuben Steff, Joe Burton, Simona R. Soare, 2020-11-25

This book offers a multidisciplinary analysis of emerging technologies and their impact on the new international security environment across three levels of analysis. While recent technological developments such as Artificial Intelligence, AI, robotics, and automation have the potential to transform international relations in positive ways, they also pose challenges to peace and security and raise new ethical, legal, and political questions about the use of power and the role of humans in war and conflict. This book makes a contribution to these debates by considering emerging technologies across three levels of analysis: 1) the international system/systemic level including the balance of power; 2) the state and its role in international affairs and how these technologies are redefining and challenging the state's traditional roles; and 3) the relationship between the state and society including how these technologies affect individuals and non-state actors. This provides specific insights at each of these levels and generates a better understanding of the connections between the international and the local when it comes to technological advance across time and space. The chapters examine the implications of these technologies for the balance of power, examining the strategies of the US, Russia, and China to harness AI, robotics, and automation, and how their militaries and private corporations are responding; how smaller and less powerful states and non-state actors are adjusting the political, ethical, and legal implications of AI and automation; what these technologies mean for how war and power is understood and utilized in the 21st century; and how these technologies diffuse power away from the state to society, individuals, and non-state actors. This volume will be of much interest to students of international security, science, and technology studies, law, philosophy, and international relations.

The Resurgence of the State Sai Felicia Krishna-Hensel, 2016-12-05. The transnational architecture of global information networks has made territorial borders less significant. Boundaries between spaces are becoming blurred in the evolving information age. But do information and communication technologies networks really lead to a weakening of the nation-state? This volume revisits the retreat of the state thesis and tests its validity in the 21st century. It considers cyberspace as a matter of collective and policy choice, prone to usurpation by governance structures. Governments around the world are already reacting to the information revolution and trying to re-establish their leading role in creating governance regimes for the Information Age. The volume comes at a historical moment when new political dynamics are detected and new conceptual models are sought to categorize the attempts to deal with global transnational issues It will intrigue the reader with expert level analysis of the role of the state in the emerging global supranational governance structures by providing historical context and conceptualizing trends and social dynamics
