The Information Revolution In The Middle East And North Africa:

The Information Revolution in the Middle East and North Africa Grey E. Burkhardt, Susan Older, 2003 This report explores the future of the information revolution in the countries of the Middle East and North Africa MENA The development gap in information and communication technology between MENA and OECD countries and between rich and poor sectors within MENA countries is likely to increase It is unlikely that most MENA countries will fully enjoy an information revolution during the next decade They have too many impediments and too few resources

The Information Revolution in the Middle East and North Africa, 2003 RAND is conducting a multiyear effort sponsored by the National Intelligence Council NIC to explore the future of the information revolution throughout the world This is a multidisciplinary effort with a broad range of participants from both inside and outside of RAND with an overarching goal of mapping the likely future of the global information revolution over the next one to two decades This effort has included a series of international conferences on specific aspects of the information revolution involving experts in various relevant areas This publication reports the results of one of those studies on the likely course of the information revolution in the Middle East and North Africa over the next five to 10 years Key questions addressed in this report include the extent to which the information revolution has taken hold in this region in general the variations between individual countries and prospects for further information technology IT related developments in the region Globalization and National Security Jonathan Kirshner, 2006 Publisher description

The Syrian Information and Propaganda War Ben Cole, 2022-02-22 This book focuses on the propaganda war between the Syrian government and the opposition movement which excludes the Islamic State and the Kurdish led SDF Drawing on international relations psychology and media studies the book encourages readers to question the dominant discourse on the war The core of the book outlines the propaganda battles over the main paradigms and narratives that framed the war exploring the shortcomings of those paradigms and narratives identifying who won the propaganda war and why and assessing what impact it had on the military side of the war In particular it focuses on the role of cognitive bias amongst primary and secondary sources in determining the outcome of the propaganda war and whether the influence of this propaganda is best explained by effects or limited effects theory Through explaining the dynamics of the propaganda war the book encourages readers to critically question the dominant discourse on the war assists them in understanding primary and secondary reporting on the war and shows that the impact of the propaganda war is best understood in terms of limited effects theory The book's main findings are that the opposition won the international propaganda war but failed to win the propaganda war inside Syria ii propaganda had relatively little effect on shaping attitudes either inside Syria or internationally instead its main effect was to reinforce attitudes that had already been shaped by other factors and iii the reality of the war lies between the conflicting paradigms and narratives being promoted by each side
