Abstract

Examination of family firms' interactions with institutional contexts has been a major research stream within family business scholarship. This study reviews three decades of research at the intersection of family firms and institutional contexts. Our review sample includes 124 articles published in 24 top-level journals across several disciplines. We adopt an institutional theory lens to synthesize this literature and explicate main understandings about how family firm behaviors/outcomes are influenced by or may influence formal and informal institutions in their institutional contexts. Moreover, we discuss major research gaps and unproductive biases in this research area and provide directions for future research.

Introduction

Institutions refer to the relatively stable systems of prescriptions that define socially acceptable behaviors and outcomes within a society (Suchman, 1995). Institutions pressure firms to operate in socially acceptable ways, and firms that conform to these pressures can be deemed legitimate (Oliver, 1991). While institutional prescriptions are not always consistent with economic rationality (Meyer & Rowan, 1977), firms that are deemed legitimate can gain certain benefits, such as favorable access to resources and relationships (DiMaggio & Powell, 1983). Alternatively, firms can attempt to change institutions as means to access more favorable competitive positions and opportunities (Battilana, Leca, & Boxenbaum, 2009).

The family governance in family firms serves as a lens through which institutional prescriptions are interpreted and from which firms' decisions then can be formed differently compared with nonfamily firms. Several characteristics of family firms suggest that family firms may interact with their institutional contexts in unique ways. Family firms' access to family resources

(e.g., labor, networks, and capital) enables them to be less dependent on formal institutional developments that help organizations employ and monitor workforce, acquire capital, and secure their property rights among different generations. Moreover, family firms' institutional overlap at the intersection of family and business institutions, concerns for preservation of their socio-emotional wealth (SEW), and reliance on social capital amplify the effects of informal institutions on their behaviors and outcomes. Consequently, scholars have increasingly shown interest in understanding institutions' effects on family firms (e.g., Gedajlovic, Carney, Chrisman, & Kellermanns, 2012; Jiang & Peng, 2011a), as well as family firms' influence on institutional

The Institution Of Literature:

The Institution of Literature Jeffrey J. Williams, 2001-12-13 In response to the classic question What is literature we usually look to the novels poems and plays on our shelves The Institution of Literature turns this question around looking instead at the institutions that house literary study It examines how our institutional practices protocols and structures mediate and produce what we call literature It shines light on usually hidden but formative dimensions of literary study from the institutional economy governing theory to the star system of professional reputation from the corporatization of cultural studies to the reconfiguration of our roles as resource managers rather than literary scholars and from the position of graduate students to the hierarchical structure of our professional organizations Gathering contributions from critics such as Michael B rub Terry Caesar Lennard Davis Vincent B Leitch Devoney Looser David R Shumway James J Sosnoski and Evan Watkins The Institution of Literature forges an original and timely line of research both criticizing current professional forms of literary study and proposing possibilities for change

The Institution of Literature Jeffrey Williams, 2002-01-01 Leading voices in literary and cultural studies examine the study of literature at the college level including the fate of theory the rise of cultural studies the academic star system and the difficult job market

The Institution of English Literature Barbara Schaff, Johannes Schlegel, Carola Surkamp, 2016-11-07 The contributions investigate the ways in which numerous institutions of English literature shape the literary field While they cover an extensive historical field ranging from the Early Modern period to the 18th century to the contemporary they focus not only on literary texts but also on extra literary ones including literary prizes literary histories and anthologies and highlight the various ways in which these negotiate the processes that constitute the literary field All contributions assert that there is no such thing as literature outside of institutions Great emphasis is therefore put on different acts of mediation

Institutions of World Literature Stefan Helgesson, Pieter Vermeulen, 2015-06-19 This volume engages critically with the recent and ongoing consolidation of world literature as a paradigm of study On the basis of an extended active and ultimately more literary sense of what it means to institute world literature it views processes of institutionalization not as limitations but as challenges to understand how literature may simultaneously function as an enabling and exclusionary world of its own It starts from the observation that literature is never simply a given but is always performatively and materially instituted by translators publishers academics and academics critics and readers as well as authors themselves This volume therefore substantiates refines as well as interrogates current approaches to world literature such as those developed by David Damrosch Pascale Casanova and Emily Apter Sections focus on the poetics of writers themselves market dynamics postcolonial negotiations of discrete archives of literature and translation engaging a range of related disciplines The chapters contribute to a fresh understanding of how singular literary works become inserted in transnational systems and conversely how transnational and institutional dimensions of literature are inflected in literary works Focusing its methodological and theoretical inquiries on a broad archive of texts spanning the triangle Europe Latin America Africa the volume unsettles North America as the self evident vantage of recent world literature debates Because of the volume s focus on dialogues between world literature and fields such as postcolonial studies translation studies book history and transnational studies it will be of interest to scholars and students in a range of areas The Institution of Literature ,1998 Institutions of Literature, 1700–1900 Jon
