The Individual Nathaniel Southgate Shaler,1910 The Individual Nathaniel Southgate Shaler,1902 The Individual Nathaniel S. Shaler,1972-01-01 The Individual Nathaniel Southgate Shaler,2015-07-09 Excerpt from The Individual A Study of Life and Death Modern science has done much to change the conceptions of men as to their place in the universe The ancient view that the earth and all its living tenants were suddenly created is passing away and in its stead there is coming in a swift and inevitable way the conviction that all we see or know is but a part of a vast orderly procession of which we can discern neither the beginning nor the end It needs but a slight acquaintance with the history of man to make it clear that the best part of his nature his moral and social qualities has to a considerable extent been founded on his beliefs concerning his origin and the ways in which he has been controlled by the powers above him It is evidently a most important question as to how far this change of view is likely to alter human conduct Is it likely to overthrow even to shake the institutions of morality or will it serve to make them firmer than before About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works The Individual; a Study of Life and Death Nathaniel Southgate Shaler,2013-09 This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book without typos from the publisher Not indexed Not illustrated 1901 edition Excerpt CHAPTER XV IMMOETALITY There are evident reasons why natural science should not have much of value to say concerning the conditions or the possibility of individual spiritual life apart from the existence of the body The little that is said in this chapter finds its justification mainly in the fact that some indeed we may say many physicists have with unjustified assumption of authority stated too much on this question so that the naturalist is entitled to make his disclaimer and to set forth what seems to him the reasonable interpretation of the truths relating to it which come within the fields of his observation Before undertaking to set forth what may be observed in the material world in relation to immortality or fairly inferred from such observations it will be profitable to consider the position of the investigator of phenomena his limitations and the nature of his successes This by way of making it plain as to how far he can expect to see into the depths of the world he seeks to explore There is a common notion one unhappily shared by many able students of Nature and by the most of those who regard themselves as naturalists that by entering this procession they become in some manner curiously enlightened as to the mysteries of the universe in a way made free to form safe judgments concerning all that goes on in that realm There is much of the ancient notions concerning the powers of priesthood in this claim to far reaching knowledge a claim which is too freely accepted as valid An examination of the matter shows us that those who are professionally engaged in what are termed scientific inquiry are doing a work which differs in no essential way from that which men have been engaged in since they entered on the Life and Death in the Gombe Chimpanzees Claire A. Kirchhoff, 2019-06-29 This book addresses how skeletons can inform us about behavior by describing skeletal lesions in the Gombe chimpanzees relating them to known life histories whenever possible and analyzing demographic patterns in the sample This is of particular interest to both primatologists and skeletal analysts who have benefited from published data on a smaller earlier skeletal sample from Gombe The Gombe skeletal collection is the largest collection of wild chimpanzees with known life histories in existence and this work significantly expands the skeletal sample from this long term research site 49 chimpanzees The book explores topics of general interest to skeletal analysts such as demographic patterns which injuries leave signs on the skeleton and rates of healing and discusses both qualitative and quantitative analysis of the patterning of lesions The book presents the data in a narrative style similar to that employed in Dr Goodall's seminal work The Chimpanzees of Gombe Readers already familiar with the Gombe chimpanzees are likely to appreciate summaries of life events correlated to observable skeletal features The book is especially relevant at this time to remind primate conservationists of the importance of the isolated chimpanzee population at Gombe National Park as well as the availability of the skeletons for study both within the park itself as well as at the University of Minnesota

Reconstructing Past Monastic Life: Volume 1: Bioarchaeology, Life and Death Lluís Lloveras, Carme Rissech, Jordi Nadal, Philip Banks, 2025-07-30 Explores health and lifeways in monastic communities focusing on palaeopathological insights into well being disabilities and burial practices across various periods Monasticism is a form of religious life in which participants renounce worldly activities to dedicate themselves primarily to spiritual matters living in small communities subject to a set of rules and isolated from the secular world Christian monasticism which originated at the end of the 3rd century in Egypt and North Africa spread to different parts of Europe in the 6th century However it was not until the Middle Ages that monastic communities became one of the most powerful institutions in Europe Monasteries and convents played a very important role not only as centers of spirituality but also as focal points of economic technological and cultural activity This multiplicity of activities carried out alongside their religious social and political roles make monasteries spaces that can be studied from very different perspectives and that unfailingly provide essential information about our history This first of two titles originates from an international conference that took place in Barcelona in January 2024 which sought to examine different aspects related to monastic life in the past and to promote and disseminate the results obtained in the latest studies undertaken within the framework of monastic complexes and their environments. These include contributions and multidisciplinary studies from archaeological, bioanthropological and or documentary perspectives. Specialists from different disciplines present developments on the topic of monasticism from different fields of study such as zooarchaeology, bioanthropology, palaeopathology, archaeology, history, documentary, disciplines, archives, cultural heritage etc. Volume 1 concentrates on health and lifeways within monastic communities focusing on palaeopathological information providing insights into physical well being and in particular the presence and significance of disabled individuals and evidence for long term health and dental issues. A variety of scientific methods of analysis are applied to cemetery populations from monasteries and nunneries of different periods to examine both causes of and contributions to the death of individuals, the composition of communities and the treatment of the dead. Studies of assemblages of faunal remains from monastic complexes consider how faunal analysis can help interpret the role of domestic species.

Life and Death in the Ancient City of Teotihuacan Rebecca Storey, 1992-01-30

Cities arose independently in both the Old World and in the pre Columbian New World. Lacking written records, many of these New World cities can be studied only through archaeology, including the earliest pre Columbian city Teotihuacan, Mexico, one of the largest cities of its time, 150 B.C. to A.D. 750. Thus an important question is how similar New World cities are to their Old World counterparts. Storey's research shows clearly that although Teotihuacan was a very different environment and culture from 17th century London, these two great cities are comparable in terms of health problems and similar death rates.

The Eternal City Sir Hall Caine, 1901

Life and Death in a German Town Panikos Panayi, 2007-03-28

The period between 1929 and 1949 represents one of the most traumatic and destructive in the history of Germany. Economic crisis, Nazism, war, destruction and post war dislocation dominated the lives of all Germans and those living in Germany. While all ethnic groups faced great hardship during these years, there were stark differences between the experience of native ethnic Germans, German refugees from Eastern Europe, German Jews, Romanies and foreigners. Using vital primary sources, archival material and insightful interviews, Panikos Panayi presents an extraordinary analysis of the individual experiences of and relationships between all these groups living in the German town of Osnabrück. He focuses on Alltagsgeschichte, the history of everyday life, to understand the realities for people living in one German location in a time of great change and upheaval. By concentrating on the wide span of 20 years of German experience he brings original breadth to an area of study more commonly associated with the narrower focus of 1933-45. Despite the centrality of race in Nazi ideology this is the first major study to look at the lives of all of the differing ethnic groups in Germany during this period. Panayi reveals the fluidity of the borderline between victims and perpetrators, how the use of forced labour dramatically changed the ethnic composition of the town and the impact of the arrival of German refugees from Eastern Europe at the end of World War II. Panayi's revealing analysis of the continuity and discontinuity in the everyday lives of Osnabruckers between 1929 and 1949 and the inter-ethnic relations during this period is an essential reference tool for anyone wanting to understand the now-time realities of living in Nazi Germany.

Butrint 5: Life and Death at a Mediterranean Port William Bowden, 2020-02-19 This is the second volume arising from the 1994-2003 excavations of the Triconch Palace at Butrint, Albania, which charted the history of a major Mediterranean waterfront site from the 2nd to the 15th centuries AD. The sequence Butrint 3: Excavations at the Triconch Palace Oxbow 2011 included the development of a palatial late Roman house followed by intensive activity between the 5th and 7th centuries involving domestic occupation, metal working, fishing and burial. The site saw renewed activity from the 10th century coinciding with the revival of the town of Butrint and for the following 300 years continued in intermittent use associated with its channel-side location. This volume reports on the finds from the site, excluding the pottery which demonstrate the ways in which the lives, diet and material culture of a Mediterranean population changed across the arc of the late Roman and Medieval periods. It includes discussion of the environmental evidence, the human and faunal remains, metal working evidence and the major assemblages of glass, coins and small finds, giving an insight into the health, subsistence base and material culture of the population of a Mediterranean site across more than 1000 years. The findings raise important questions regarding the ways in which changes in the circumstances of the town affected the population between Late Antiquity and the Middle Ages. They illustrate in particular how an urban Roman center became more rural during the 6th century with a population that faced major challenges in their health and living conditions.
