Human Rights and Intellectual Property Rights Mpasi Sinjela, 2007-11-30 This collection offers an overview of the issues involved concerning the interface between human rights and intellectual property rights IPRs It makes clear that two schools of thought have developed The first school maintains that human rights and IPRs are in fundamental conflict Strong protection of IP is incompatible with human rights obligations Thus for resolving the conflict between the two it is suggested that human rights should always prevail over IPRs Whereas the second school of thought asserts that human rights and IPRs pursue the same aim that is to define the appropriate scope of private monopoly power to create incentives for authors and inventors while ensuring that the public has adequate access to the fruits of their efforts Accordingly they argue human rights and IP are compatible However what is needed is to strike a balance between the provision of incentives to innovate and public access to products of that innovation This collection explores this balance and the extent to which human rights standards can influence the interpretation of IP norms for example in defining the scope of IPRs The discussion on the relationship of human rights and IPRs is an ongoing one this volume makes a valuable contribution to the debate and will further stimulate the interest to explore and address these complex and challenging issues This is the second volume in The Raoul Wallenberg Institute of Human Rights and Humanitarian Law New Authors series which contains the best theses from the human rights masters programmes in Lund and Venice

International Trade in Services and Domestic Regulations Panagiotis Delimatsis,2007-12-27 In 2005 the WTO Appellate body ruled that the United States total prohibition on cross border gambling services was unlawful under the General Agreement on Trade in Services GATS The questions raised by the case whether and how a Government could block service provision on moral grounds went to the heart of key controversies surrounding international economic law How do you reconcile a liberal system of international trade in services with national governments desire to protect social values through service regulation How much control are the WTO members willing to transfer to the WTO How much regulatory diversity can the international trading system withstand This book provides a comprehensive analysis of the regulation of services under the WTO s GATS Agreement Through a thorough examination of the GATS negotiation history substantive provisions judicial interpretation and ongoing reform process the book presents a clear picture of how the multilateral trading system justifies and tolerates regulatory diversity In this respect the book focuses on the core general principles of necessity and transparency which would allow the assessment of the consistency with the GATS of domestic regulations in services at a horizontal cross sectoral level In addition the book reviews with a critical eye the ongoing GATS negotiations on the creation of rules on domestic regulations
