Heffernan, 2024-11-22 This book builds on Heffernan's last book Rights and Wrongs Rethinking the Foundations of Criminal Justice by examining the class and racial disparities at the heart of current law disparities that according to many generate a system of criminal injustice It argues that these disparities run throughout the legal system they re present in policing corrections and sentencing It discusses the relationship between the two kinds of justice social justice and criminal justice and how to ensure fairness in state imposed punishment It theorises the extent to which criminal law must address considerations of social justice to ensure a fair system It proposes a framework for analyzing disparities provides an overview of contemporary

Written in an accessible way it introduces readers to philosophical theory and doctrines in constitutional law and thus it speaks to a wide audience concerned about racial and class disparities in the criminal justice system. It responds to a half century's worth of public concern about the legitimacy of the state's exercise of its penal power while explaining the pertinence of social justice principles to the criminal justice system. William Heffernan is Professor of Criminal Justice at John Jay College of Criminal Justice USA where he has taught John Jay for more than 30 years. Succinct but comprehensive this text offers a careful examination of possible relationships between social justice theory and criminal justice practice and illuminates the role that the legal system has played in both preventing and assisting social change and power dynamics. For each identified group important landmark court decisions are used to demonstrate the plight of the powerless and the quest for equal rights.
