Coping, and Well-being* Bram P. Buunk,Frederick X. Gibbons,A. Buunk,2013-05-13 Over the past decades the field of health psychology has witnessed a tremendous growth and social psychologists have contributed substantially to the theoretical foundation of this field Their research has focused on a wide variety of health relevant topics such as how individuals decide to respond to threats to their health and well being how and why they change their behavior to avoid such threats and especially how they adjust to or cope with the risk of threatening disease and with the diseases themselves As diverse as this literature may be however there does appear to be a common theme throughout much of it the observation that comparison of oneself and one s health status and coping efforts with others is an integral part of the coping process Consequently social comparison theory is increasingly becoming recognized as a fruitful framework for illuminating health related issues A still expanding literature is exploring the role of social comparisons with respect to coping with a wide range of health problems including cancer physical decline among the aged rheumatoid arthritis AIDS stress at work and occupational burnout and eating disorders Social comparison theory has augmented knowledge about the ways in which people cope with stressful events and thus has contributed significantly to it At a more basic level research in this applied context has made significant contributions to the development of social comparison theory itself The present volume presents an overview of the various ways in which social comparison theory has been applied to issues related to health coping and well being and also points out how these applications have contributed to our insight into the way humans employ social comparison information Given the attention paid to theoretical and applied issues this volume will appeal to a wide audience including social and health psychologists as well as therapists physicians clinicians medical sociologists nurses and those involved in the growing field of nursing research

Genes on the Couch Paul Gilbert, Kent G. Bailey, 2014-07-10 Philosophers and therapists have long theorised about how psychological mechanisms for love jealousy anxiety depression and many other human characteristics may have evolved over millions of years In the dawn of the new insights on evolution provided by Darwin s theories of natural selection Freud Jung and Klein sought to identify and understand human motives emotions and information processing as functions deeply rooted in our evolved history Despite this promising start and major developments in modern evolutionary psychology anthropology and sociobiology the last fifty years has seen little in the way of therapies derived from an evolutionary understanding of human psychology The contributors to this timely book illuminate how an evolution focused approach to psychopathology can offer new insights for different schools of therapy and provide a rationale for therapeutic integration Genes on the Couch brings together respected clinicians who have integrated evolutionary insights into their case conceptualisations and therapeutic interventions Various psychotherapy schools are represented and each author provides illustrative examples of the interventions used Specific topics addressed include the nature of evolved mental mechanisms regulation dysregulation of internal processes attachment and kinship in therapy the importance of internalising warmth as a therapeutic goal kin selection and incest avoidance co operation and deception in social relations difficulties in working with certain male clients gender differences in therapy and the roles of shame and guilt in treatment Providing up to date summaries of recent thinking in this increasing important but diverse area Genes on the Couch will be of interest to psychotherapists psychiatrists and a wide range of mental health professionals Bullying in the Workplace John Lipinski, Laura M. individualized and technologized lives Wexler lays out the evidence for a growing movement and then draws parallels to periods of mystical revitalization from the past In the course of this discussion he draws on the work of Marx Weber and Durkheim as well as from contemporary social theory      Identity and Difference Kathryn Woodward,1997-05-05 Book on identity      The ^AOxford Handbook of Evolutionary Psychology and Behavioral Endocrinology Lisa L. Paradoxes of Gender Judith Lorber, 1994-01-01 In this pathbreaking book a well known feminist and sociologist who is also the Founding Editor of Gender why transvestites transsexuals and hermaphrodites do not affect the conceptualization of two genders and two sexes in Western societies why most of our cultural images of women are the way men see them and not the way women see themselves why all women in modern society are expected to have children and be the primary caretaker why domestic work is almost always the sole responsibility of wives even when they earn more than half the family income why there are so few women in positions of authority when women can be found in substantial numbers in many occupations and professions why women have not benefited from major social revolutions Lorber argues that the whole point of the gender system today is to maintain structured gender inequality to produce a subordinate class women that can be exploited as workers sexual partners childbearers and emotional nurturers Calling into question the inevitability and necessity of gender she envisions a society structured for equality where no gender racial ethnic or social class group is allowed to monopolize economic educational and cultural resources or the positions of power
