Participatory Politics John Bragg, 2014-04-16 Focussing on events in the Anatolian town of Tokat during the final two decades of the great Ottoman legal and administrative reforms known as the Tanzimat 1839-76 this book applies elements of social networking theory to analyze and assess the establishment of local governments across the Middle East The author's key finding is that the state's efforts to centralize authority succeeded only when and where locals acted as the primary agents of change Independent notables such as the military and y n demanded wealth and state offices in exchange for meting out reform measures according to local idioms of power Newly created administrative bodies also offered greater social mobility to a growing multiconfessional middle class in small towns like Tokat The state was desperate to reform but opportunistic provincials were eager to have it only on their own terms Challenging false assumptions about the limited scope of participatory politics in the Middle East during the nineteenth century Ottoman Notables and Participatory Politics will be of interest to students and scholars of Political Economy History and Middle East Studies Tribes and Empire on the

Margins of Nineteenth-Century Iran Arash Khazeni, 2011-06-01 Tribes and Empire on the Margins of Nineteenth Century Iran traces the history of the Bakhtiyari tribal confederacy of the Zagros Mountains through momentous times that saw the opening of their territory to the outside world As the Qajar dynasty sought to integrate the peoples on its margins into the state the British Empire made commercial inroads into the once inaccessible mountains on the frontier between Iran and Iraq The distance between the state and the tribes was narrowed through imperial projects that included the building of a road through the mountains the gathering of geographical and ethnographic information and the exploration for oil which culminated during the Iranian Constitutional Revolution These modern projects assimilated autonomous pastoral nomadic tribes on the peripheries of Qajar Iran into a wider imperial territory and the world economy Tribal subjects did not remain passive amidst these changes in environment and society however and projects of empire in the hinterlands of Iran were always mediated through encounters accommodation and engagement with the tribes In contrast to the range of literature on the urban classes and political center in Qajar Iran Arash Khazeni adopts a view from the Bakhtiyari tents on the periphery Drawing upon Persian chronicles tribal histories and archival sources from London Tehran and Isfahan this book opens new ground by approaching nineteenth century Iran from its edge and placing the tribal periphery at the heart of a tale about empire and assimilation in the modern Middle East War and Peace in Qajar Persia Roxane

Farmanfarmanian, 2008-01-30 With new and existing evidence being reconsidered this edited collection takes a multidisciplinary approach to discussing the Qajar system within the context of the wars that engulfed it and the periods of peace that ensued It throws new light on the decision making processes the restraints on action and the political exigencies at play during the Qajar years The Politics of Self-Expression Markus Daechsel, 2006-09-27 The 1930s to 1950s witnessed the rise and dominance of a political culture across much of North India which combined unprecedented levels of mobilization and organization with an effective depoliticization of politics On the one hand obsessed with world events people also came to understand politics as a question of personal morality and achievement In other words politics was about expressing the self in new ways and about finding and securing an imaginary home in a fast moving and often terrifying universe The scope and arguments of this book make an innovative contribution to the historiography of modern South Asia by focusing on the middle class milieu which was the epicentre of this new political culture Iran between Islamic

Nationalism and Secularism Vanessa Martin, 2013-09-16 With the ratification of a new constitution in December 1906 Iran embarked on a great movement of systemic and institutional change which along with the introduction of new ideas was to be one of the most abiding legacies of the first Iranian revolution known as the Constitutional Revolution This uprising was significant not only for introducing secular understandings of government but also Islamic visions of what could constitute a national assembly The events of the Constitutional Revolution in Tehran have been much discussed but the provinces despite their crucial role in the revolution have received less attention Here Vanessa Martin seeks to redress this imbalance She does so by firstly analysing the role of the Islamic debate in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries and its relationship with secular ideas and secondly by examining the ramifications of this debate in the main cities of Tabriz Shiraz Isfahan and Bushehr When Muzaffar al Din Shah came to power in 1896 on the assassination of his father Nasr al Din Shah Iran was in the midst of social and political upheaval which culminated in the creation for the first time in Iran s history of a constitution and a new majlis consultative assembly In this book Martin looks in particular at the idea of modern Islamic government as it was conceptualized at the time an idea which had been emerging for some time before the revolution having its origins in the vision of the reformist pan Islamist Jamal al Din al Afghani She therefore traces the evolution of the debate around whether Iran was to be a secular or an Islamic society or a combination of the two together with the implications of this discourse in terms of popular perception and public opinion By looking at the revolution outside of Tehran she highlights the intra elite rivalries and the Islamic response to the Constitutional Revolution from the moderate views of Thiqat al Islam to the emergence of Islamic organizations and militancy It is through this examination of Iran s major provincial cities that Martin concludes that in each region the Constitutional Revolution took on a character of its own From an exploration of the elites of Shiraz including the effective mayor Qavam al Mulk to the power centre of the then governor of Isfahan Prince Zill al Sultan and from the revolutionary fervor of Tabriz to the commercial centre of Bushehr Martin sheds light on the historical political religious and geographical importance of these cities By examining the interaction between Islam and secularism during this tumultuous time Iran between Islamic Nationalism and Secularism offers a vital new approach to the understanding of a key moment in Iran s history Coming of Age in Iran
