Ijams' friend, Kris Light was busy photographing snowflakes yesterday and we are so glad she has allowed us to share her work with you! We love diversity in all things and these snowflakes are no exception!

Kris Light is the science outreach educator for the American Museum of Science and Energy in Oak Ridge. She enjoys using photography to share her love of nature. The snowflakes are caught on black velvet and photographed with a 105mm macro lens and a 36mm extender.
