

The Mission of Social Work Revisited: An Agenda for the 1990s

COMPLEX FORCES affect the social work profession and often result in new technologies, goals, and targets of intervention. Sometimes the mission of the profession changes—to the approbation of some and the chagrin of others.

What is and what should be the role of social work in society today? Periodic reexaminations of social work's mission can help the profession clarify its current direction or correct any inadvertent deviations in its development. Reexaminations also can help the profession face the challenges of the 1990s (Wenocur & Reisch, 1989). The following analysis offers one way to view the changes in social work and supports the proposed mission direction the authors believe social work should follow to meet current challenges.

Some recent observations of retired social work educators examining social work's mission seem appropriate. In a national study (Walt & Craft, 1988), retired social work faculty were asked for their perceptions of the changing directions in social work education and practice. The retirees cited three concerns:

1. the diminishing role of advocacy, including the apparent abandonment of service to poor people as a focal point for the profession
2. the growth of private practice and the dominance of therapy as the principal mode of intervention
3. the expansion of doctoral education, which they believed to have resulted in a weakened relationship between education and practice.

Although the concerns of the retired social workers could be dismissed as the difficulty of an old guard in passing its mantle to a new generation, they also could be heard as an alert by a council of elders signaling that the profession is drifting from its earlier mission. In either case, the replies reflect concern about changes in the profession.

Thomas Walt
Victor Groze

The forces that affect the social work profession, including the "industrial" takeover of social welfare, the expansion of the private agency, and the change in clientele served by social workers, as well as a change in the motivators of social work students, have contributed to a growing conservatism in social work. In addition, a dominant middle-class America, filled with its own problems, seems to be capturing more of social work's resources. The result has been a drift in the mission of social work and a weakening of the advocacy or political component in social work education and practice. The advocacy role proposed in this article is the clinical activist model. In the model, the clinician's role is that of data gatherer and analyst, in addition to therapist. The client becomes the centerpiece of change, revealing to the clinician the types of systemwide changes or reforms that are needed. The structural changes necessary to implement this model are discussed briefly.

Changes in a profession may originate internally or externally. Modifications in mission or direction can come from leadership and from rank and file. Epstein (1970) indicated that the objectives of divisions or specialties within the profession can shape the goals of the larger profession.

Cultural forces also influence professions. In social work, which depends on cultural support, professional self-determination is often difficult to achieve. Meinert (1980) suggested that social work is a "concrete expression and instrument" of the status quo at any given time. A profession that depends on economic support from the government and the private sector tends to align its politics with its supporters (Wenocur & Reisch, 1989). There is little likelihood that a profession would aggressively challenge the economic forces that support its continuation (Epstein, 1970).

Several external and internal forces have influenced social work recently. Corresponding modifications in social work education and the profession's orientation can be linked to these influences. The following is a discussion of such changes and their apparent impact on the mission of social work.

The Conservative Retreat

The 1960s: Activism in Social Work

The events of the 1960s awakened a new leadership in social work. In turn, the new leadership attracted activists to the profession. Advocacy opportunities within public welfare expanded, especially under the publicly funded War on Poverty of President Lyndon Johnson (DiNitto & Dye, 1987). Social work became more focused on the needs of poor people and minority groups.

The social work profession attempted to become multicultural in the 1960s. A growing number of new professionals represented racial and ethnic minorities. Unfortunately, this trend was short-lived. In 1969, 21.6 percent of full-time master of social work (MSW) students were minorities (Council on Social Work Education [CSWE], 1969). By 1975, this percentage had decreased to 21 percent and by 1985 to 17.1 percent (CSWE, 1976, 1986).

The 1970s: Industrialization of Social Work

In the early 1970s, under the Nixon administration, social work and social welfare experienced an "industrial takeover." Public welfare had become quality of care for senior citizens

Older People and Their Caregivers Across the Spectrum of Care focuses on two major aspects of elderly care assessment and caregiving. This book examines assessment techniques and models used by social workers and other health care professionals to determine the type and extent of care necessary to meet the needs of the elderly. In addition, it voices recent concerns about the use of standardized models for all older adults. This book also addresses the burdens and benefits of being a caregiver to older relatives or friends and mentions several programs made available for caregivers through social services.

Older People and Their Caregivers Across the Spectrum of Care reviews assessment techniques and practice models that address issues such as abuse and HIV/AIDS care. This book also provides information about currently overlooked issues that will increasingly affect assessment and intervention, including diversity in cultural or religious beliefs and sexual orientation. This book is also unique in its focus on those unsung unpaid heroes—relatives and friends who assist elderly companions with their financial, social, and physical daily needs.

With Older People and Their Caregivers Across the Spectrum of Care, you will find vital information on two elderly victims' services: one involving social services and the other involving criminal action. The challenges of assessing older adults with HIV/AIDS, the pros and cons of long distance caregiving, a life course assessment intervention model used at military colleges to help officers prepare proactively for parent care, the Caregivers and Professionals Partnership (CAPP) which employs innovative outreach strategies to family caregivers of adults, the Northport VA Friendly Companion Program which enhances opportunities for interpersonal interaction, African American caregivers and their experiences with African American elders. Social workers and caregivers will find the information in this book vital in their work. Psychologically Informed Environments Dean Whittington PhD, 2016-11-16 Psychologically Informed Environments outlines the problems inherent in working with marginal populations such as the homeless The analysis considers the issue of masculinities and how these are erased within current academic discourses The key issue is around how emotional recovery is generated using therapeutic techniques based on praxis It also explores how organisations can be reconfigured to initiate emotional recovery and so stop people moving around the perpetual treadmill This needs to be undertaken by grounding the client in the present working on past traumas those which shape the current lifestyle whilst thinking about a sustainable future to move into This involves the therapist moving into the bath of steel the client inhabits The book sets out to explore some of the problems arising from past interventions and situating a move to an emotional recovery by rethinking current practices It raises considerable questions around training research and the style of the current set of interventions being undertaken All should be appraised on whether they generate emotional recovery This can be viewed by the use of case histories to depict the work undertaken and requires the use of phenomenological methods to detail the work
