Morgan, 1980 Collecting her family's own stories and photographs Kathryn Morgan has brought to life the attempts of five generations of black women to cope with the fears, angers and anxieties of life in a hostile white society Compiled in three parts the Caddy Legends childhood reminiscences and Maggie's memories of color and race these tales are written in the southern black oral tradition and were told and retold as emotional buffers against an inherently inhuman situation According to the author family folklore was the antidote used by our parents grandparents and great grandparents to help us counteract the poison of self hate engendered by racism The two principal warriors in these stories are Caddy the author's great grandmother slave born fountainhead of the family's oral tradition and Maggie the author's mother who could often pass because her skin was so light Through their recollections we receive an intense portrayal of everyday black life in a variety of settings and periods as well as characters and personalities From Caddy's home in Lynchburg Virginia to the successive generations that settled in North Philadelphia the psychological effects of emotional and physical segregation are recounted in many telling and ironic episodes Stories such as How Caddy Found Her Mother The Whipping and the Promise and God and Lice are profound in the truths they reveal Attempting to make the family's past applicable to the present the stories invariably had the function of bolstering the individual's self esteem The fifteen photographs included in the book help introduce the reader to the Morgan family Too often traditional scholarship has presented black family life only in statistical aggregates or as a social problem Children of Strangers is a new kind of evidence about black urban and ethnic life it provides striking insights into the successful strategies used by black families to raise their children in a white dominated world Author note Kathryn L Morganteaches History at Swarthmore College
