ABSTRACT – We sought to answer which procedures have been used to train parents within the mental health field, how often the behavior skills training (BST), as well as its components, is used, and how effective such procedures are. In order to do so, a systematic literature review, using the Education Collection ProQuest database, was conducted. The search terms used were “behavior skills training”, “parents”, and its correlates in Portuguese. Papers published between 2010 and 2019 were analyzed, focusing on parent training procedures and their effects. Among the 28 analyzed papers, 4 of them used BST. The remaining studies used some of its components. Twenty-four studies were effective on changing parent behavior. Issues that still require more empirical investigation are discussed.

KEYWORDS: parents, behavior skills training, BST, systematic literature review.

Procedimentos de Treino de Pais no Âmbito da Saúde Mental: Uma Revisão Sistemática da Literatura

RESUMO – Buscou-se responder quais procedimentos têm sido utilizados para treinar pais no âmbito da saúde mental, qual a frequência do uso do treinamento de habilidades comportamentais e seus componentes, e qual a efetividade de tais procedimentos. Foi conduzida uma revisão sistemática utilizando-se a base Education Collection ProQuest. Termos de busca foram “behavior skills training” (BST) e “parents” e seus correlatos em português. Artigos publicados entre 2010 e 2019 foram analisados, com ênfase nos procedimentos de treino de pais e seus efeitos. Dentre os 28 artigos analisados, 4 usaram o BST. Os outros estudos usaram algum de seus componentes. Vinte e quatro estudos foram efetivos para mudar o comportamento dos pais. Discutem-se questões que ainda necessitam mais investigação empírica.

PALAVRAS-CHAVE: pais, treinamento de habilidades comportamentais, BST, revisão sistemática da literatura.

Parents have an undeniable influence over several aspects of the development of their children, including emotional and motor ones, as well as cognition, socialization, language, self-care, and academic performance (e.g., Fabiano et al., 2012). Research has shown that children who go through family instability and coercive parenting practices over their early years of life present an increased risk for emotional and behavioral difficulties (Bolsoni-Silva & Loureiro, 2020; Lobo et al., 2011).

Despite the parental influence on the child development, in fact, many parents have not played their co-responsibility roles, due to different reasons (Wagner et al., 2005). An example of such reasons comes from the interaction between work and family: many hours or negative experiences at work reduce, both, the amount and quality of interactions between parents and their children (Hartung & Hahlweg, 2011). Another example, perhaps even originated in the first one, includes, but is not limited to, outsourcing the care service

Systematic Parent Training Procedures Cases And Issues:

Systematic Parent Training: Procedures, Cases and Issues, 1975 Systematic Parent Training William Hansford Miller, 1975 Progress in Behavior Modification Michel Hersen, Richard M. Eisler, Peter M. Miller, 2013-10-22 Progress in Behavior Modification Volume 19 covers the developments in the study of behavior modification The book discusses neuropsychology and behavior therapy the progress in parent training and the nature and measurement of agoraphobia The text also describes childhood and adolescent obesity with emphasis on the progress in behavioral assessment and treatment the conceptualization assessment and intervention in fire emergencies and behavioral pediatrics The assessment of anorexia nervosa and bulimia is also considered Psychologists psychiatrists and pediatricians will find the book invaluable Parents as Educators Keith J. Topping, 2025-08-05 Modern practice in the 1980s was to involve parents increasingly in the education of their children and was supported by legislation Particularly when children had special needs parents required structured training and support to ensure they affectively sustained their vital role as educators at home Many large scale programmes to provide this had been developed throughout the world at the time for example Home Start Portage Home Visiting Projects and Paired Reading Projects However not all of these had been thoroughly evaluated and the existing literature was scattered and difficult to access Some projects demonstrated spectacular results and high cost effectiveness while others proved more disappointing Originally published in 1986 this book critically analyses over 600 international English language research reports on the effectiveness of parent training programmes In addition a detailed guide to the practicalities of planning projects is provided together with a comprehensive directory of useful resource materials After an introductory overview the evidence on the effects on child progress of parental involvement in school activities is reviewed as is research on the impact of schemes of regular structured communication between home and school Programmes designed to train parents to accelerate the development of their children at home are considered in the subsequent chapters starting with ordinary children Much of the book reviews projects targeted on children with some sort of special educational need from children whose special needs stem from a widespread difficulty such as poverty or second language learning systematically through to children whose needs stem from rarer and more severe issues Each chapter has its own summary for ease of reader use while an overall summary chapter points out best buys and directions for future developments This volume will be of major interest to teachers psychologists social workers community health personnel community educationalists researchers many others working with parents and children and to some parents themselves This book is a re issue originally published in 1986 The language used is a reflection of its era and no offence is meant by the Publishers to any reader by this re publication Clinical Behavior Therapy with Children Thomas H. Ollendick, Jerome A. Cerny, 2013-03-08 As noted by its title the focus of this book is centered on an examination of behavior therapy with children in clinical settings Throughout our goal has been to examine theoretical underpinnings review empirical research and illustrate clinical utility for a variety of behavioral procedures with children In pursuing this goal we have described child behavior therapy as an approach based on empirical methodology derived from behavioral principles and focused upon adjustment disorders of children The hallmark of such an approach is its accountability the extent to which the procedures and techniques presented in this text are demonstrably accountable must be determined at least partially by the reader As students of child behavior we have become sensitized to two trends in behavior therapy with children during the preparation of this book First we have been concerned with the simple application of behavioral procedures to children irrespective of developmental considerations All too frequently assessment strategies and treatment procedures found to be useful with adults have been applied to children in an indiscriminate fashion For example some recent studies have examined and assessed the very same social skill deficits in children as in adults e g lack of eye contact delayed latency of response and absence of positive commendatory responses Surely skill deficits differ from age to age just as they differ from situation to situation

Assessment and Therapy for Young Dysfluent Children Lena Rustin, Elaine Kelman, 1995-06-08 Clinicians continue to be anxious about the assessment and treatment of dysfluency but all the evidence suggests that early intervention is of primary importance in preventing long term chronic stuttering This practical programme aims to provide the means to assess the child's speech and language and the family life style to identify the children at risk and to plan appropriate treatment for the child concerned

Handbook of Behavioural Family Therapy Ian Falloon, 2015-07-30 First published in 1988 behavioural family therapists worked in an area that had greatly changed since its inception over 20 years before Growing out of the pioneering work of Gerald Patterson Robert Paul Liberman and Richard Stuart whose backgrounds vary from psychology to psychiatry to social work behavioural family therapy BFT had evolved to encompass systems theory considerations of the therapeutic alliance as well as approaches to accounting for and restructuring family members subjective experiences through cognitive strategies As BFT had not been the brain child of any one charismatic innovator but rather of a wide array of clinicians and researchers developing and rigorously testing hypotheses it is fitting that this much needed summation of the field was a collaborative product of an array of well established practitioners of the time They discuss in Part 1 of the book the theoretical parameters of BFT focusing on modular behavioural strategies the indications for therapy assessment of family problems pertinent issues arising in clinical practice and approaches to the problem of resistance to change Contributors to Part 2 then apply theory to such clinical situations as parent training and helping families cope with patients suffering from developmental disabilities alcoholism schizophrenia senile dementia as well as anxiety obsessive compulsive and depressive disorders Specific attention is also given to acute inpatient and primary health care settings While BFT had already proved quite effective in treating a great number of family problems it was only in its infancy at the time of writing As Falloon says in his overview all exponents of the method are constantly involved with the process of refinement each clinician is a researcher each family member is a research subject and each researcher is contributing to clinical advancement This openness in combination with a willingness to modify sacred tenets of behaviourism while adapting proven techniques from other family therapies made this title a landmark in its field As such it was not only of interest to all clinicians and researchers with a behavioural slant but also to all family therapists who wished to challenge themselves to develop an integrative approach Teachers and Parents Robert Bruce Rutherford, Eugene B. Edgar, 1979 The First Session with Children and Adolescents Alvin E. House, 2002-02-28 The initial evaluation of a client whether in a formal diagnostic process or as a first therapy contact is the beginning of the process of providing that client with help This book provides a thorough practical primer on carrying out initial mental health evaluations with children and adolescents The focus is on efficiently eliciting the information needed for formulating the young person s difficulties clarifying the diagnostic situation and planning for treatment or referral Drawing on the available research literature as well as the author s 25 years of professional experience this user friendly book will facilitate the work of practitioners in any discipline or clinical setting Families with Disabled Children United States.
