The teacher is a very influential person in the learning process. Therefore, the teacher must bring his students to the goal to be achieved. Teachers must patronize students, teachers should be widely-held, and criteria for a teacher is to have the authority that can give the impression and influence [2].

In principle, teachers are only responsible for the implementation of the teaching and learning process. But also, he is expected to take responsibility for achieving national goals [3]. In this regard, efforts to educate and nurture young people need to be improved, even starting early on in the family (parents), school, or community [4]. Personality does not occur immediately, but it is formed through a long life process, therefore many factors that take part in the formation of the human personality [5]. Thus whether a person's character is good or bad, strong or weak is determined by the factors that affect the course of one's life. In this case, education plays an essential role in the formation of personality.

Thus, a religious teacher has a critical task that is participating in fostering the child's personality in addition to teaching religious knowledge to children, religious teachers must improve the private children who have been damaged, because of education in the family [6]. The religious teacher must realize that everything in himself is the element of cultivation for his students. In addition to education and teaching deliberately conducted by religious teachers for students, it is also very important and decisive also is the personality, attitude and way of life of the teacher itself, even how to dress, how to get along, talk and face any problems, which directly does not has to do with teaching, but in education or personal coaching the children, these things are very influential [7].
