Conscript Nation Elizabeth Shesko, 2020-05-12 Military service in Bolivia has long been compulsory for young men This service plays an important role in defining identity citizenship masculinity state formation and civil military relations in twentieth century Bolivia The project of obligatory military service originated as part of an attempt to restrict the power of indigenous communities after the 1899 civil war During the following century administrations from oligarchic to revolutionary expressed faith in the power of the barracks to assimilate shape and educate the population Drawing on a body of internal military records never before used by scholars Elizabeth Shesko argues that conscription evolved into a pact between the state and society It not only was imposed from above but was also embraced from below because it provided a space for Bolivians across divides of education ethnicity and social class to negotiate their relationships with each other and with the state Shesko contends that state formation built around military service has been characterized in Bolivia by multiple layers of negotiation and accommodation The resulting nation state was and is still hierarchical and divided by profound differences but it never was simply an assimilatory project It instead reflected a dialectical process to define the state and its relationships of Basque and Navajo Still other factors are historical such as the way Canaanite was supplanted in present day Israel by another classical language Hebrew Although the volume offers considerable sophistication in the treatment of language ethnicity and identity it has been written for the non specialized reader whether student or layperson The contributors are an international group of well known scholars in a range of fields Fishman and Garc a provide a detailed introduction that addresses the difficulty of assessing the success or failure of a language They also present a conclusion that integrates the data presented in the volume

Kimberly Anderson,2009-01-01 This book on bilingual education policy represents a multidimensional and longitudinal study of policy processes as they play out on the ground a single school in Los Angeles and over time both within the same school and also within the state of Georgia In order to reconstruct this complex policy process Anderson impressively marshals a great variety of forms of discourse Most of this discourse of course comes from overheard discussions and spontaneous interviews conducted at a particular school the voices of teachers and administrators Such discourse forms the heart of her ethnographic findings Yet Anderson also brings an ethnographer's eye to national and regional debates as they are conducted and represented in different forms of media especially newspapers and magazines She then uses the key theoretical concept of articulation to conceptually link these media representations with local school discourse The result is an illuminating account of how everyday debates at a particular school and media debates occurring more broadly mutually inform one another
